It is this style of dress that will be worn-in place of the shirt waist suit. There is no doubt that it has many good points in its favor. Take, for example, the _jumper frock for a young girl, and let us look into its possibilities for usefulness. The pattern-sonsists of three garments—the skirt, the waist and the bib jumper. In mak ing up the gown it would be wise to have at least twa waists to wear with it, and two or mor jumper bibs. Buchanan's Wife The Story of a Woman Who Dared to Wrest to Herself the Love and Hoppiness That Wore Denied Her by Cruel Circumstances. By Dustus Miles Forman and Published by Fermission of Harper & Bros., New York and London-

"I left Ellen Trevor and Stambolof on the east verandah of the house," she said. "As usual, the child had been stalking him for some hours, and nad, at last, cornered him there. She seem ed very tremulous and very happy over running the poor man to earth. 1 couldn't bear it, so I came away. They were talking about her soul when I left -at least, she was. It appears that it is a most unusual soul—a sad, sweet, un-appreciated one. Poor Stambolof! He looked like a large, solemn dog-a Bor-zoi, for choice-being annoyed by a kit-

Beatrix Buchanan laughed. "You shan't abuse Alianor Trevor!" she protested. "She's a sweet child, Aunt Arabena, and I love her very dearly."

"Quite so, angel," said the old woman, still apparently deep in slumber. "So do I. And I will not quarrel with you. So heap insult and calumny upon my ancient head as you will. I shall not strike you. Or isn't 'calumny' the word I want' Just what does calumny mean' Can no one tell me? "Alianor's going at the end of the week," said the other woman. "She doesn't know it yet, but she's going. Three different people, to my knowl-edge, want her at Newport and two at other places. She's staying on here for my sake, but I won't have it any longer. I won't cage her up here when she won't cage her up here when she ought to be away having a good time." "Inhospitable hussy!" rumbled old Arabella from the depths of her chair. "And you're going, too, Aunt Arabel-la," pursued Mrs. Buchanan, "and Stambolof. He really has to go. He told me this morning. And Harry. I'm going to turn you all out." Arabella Crowley sat up among her cushions in wrathful astonishment. "Well, of all the—the absurd non-sense!" she cried. "Youre mad—quite

"Because you're neglecting a thousand things and people, to be here," said the young woman. "You're leaving every-thing at Red Rose and in town at loose ends, just to bear me company. All of ends, just to bear me company. All of you are giving up things that you ought not to, every day, and I won't have it any longer. Oh, I'm quite serious! 1 mean it.
