

tinuance in this station, he still embraced any opportunity that occurred for promoting or recommending the interests of the Society. He was endowed with talents of a high order, with a persuasive eloquence, and great command of temper. He was indefatigable in his application to business; and shewed great sagacity and quickness in unravelling the most intricate subjects. He was always easy of access, and courteous in his intercourse with men of all ranks in society. He cultivated a taste for literature, science, and the liberal arts; and was ever ready to encourage those pursuits in others.

The following Report from the Treasurer shews a balance in favour of the Society of £17 9s. 6d., but a much larger sum will be necessary to meet an account for printing the first and second parts of the third volume of the Society's Transactions, due to Messrs. Armour, of Montreal. It appears that this account has been held back until the present year, from some mistake in Messrs. Armour's books.
