Spanner and Pollock Left in Final Tennis Handicap.

The men's tennis tourney in the St. Matthew's club tourney was brought to the finals yesterday when Spanner defeated Bagley and Pollock disposed of Chas. Dineen in one of the closest matches of the tourney. The day event was left undecided from the day before when each had won a set at 6-4, 7-9 on resuming play to-day Pollock pulled out the first set 6-4 and the next only after 28 games had been played, 15-13. Dineen was within a point of both sets on several occasions, but his opponent was very steady and finally won him down. The finals will be played this afternoon at 3.30. The invitation tournament next week promises one of the best week's tennis of the season. Nearly all of the prominent local players have accepted the club's invitation and to-day the entry of Mr. Yerey, the Montreal crack, was received. He is considered the best player they have in Montreal at the present time and only lost the Canadian championship in the finals to Capt. Foulkes of Ottawa. Foulkes of the game will be pleased to hear that Mr. Burgess, who on several occasions has won the open singles at the club tournament, will again be a competitor, and Mrs. Hannan will make her first appearance in the city since winning the Canadian and Ohio State championships. Yesterday's results—Spanner (30) beat Bagley (15) 6-2, 6-1. Pollock (16) beat Chas. Dineen (30) 8-6, 15-13. Miss Pearson (30) beat Miss Doble (12) 20-6, 12-6, 6-4. To-day's program—3.30 Spanner v. Pollock (final) 4 p.m. Miss Pearson v. Miss Spanner.

NAVAL DEFENCES MAY UNITE THE DOMINIONS

Even If Joe Chamberlain Was Unsuccessful Years Ago In His Effort Along Same Line.

I. N. Ford, the London correspondent of The New York Tribune, writing under date of July 27, says:

Naval defences may prove the common bond for uniting serious overseas. Mr. Chamberlain when he was at the colonial office tried to convince the premiers of the self-governing confederations that it was their duty to contribute systematically to the defence of the empire.

When Sir Wilfrid Laurier declined to be drawn into "the maelstrom of European armaments" he fell back upon tariff reform with preferential trade for the colonies as the only practical measure for taking up imperial federation on the business side. When a free trade government is in power there is no alternative policy. This common ground for imperial federation, if anywhere, is found in naval defence, if anywhere, and Lord Greve is endeavoring this week to make a working arrangement with representatives of five groups of colonies.

These colonies are represented by their premiers: the South African Confederation has not yet been organized, but the premiers of four colonies are here, and Australia and Canada have each sent three delegates to the conference. Battleships have been offered by New Zealand and Australia, and resolutions have been passed by the Dominion Parliament which indicate recognition of the colonies as naval powers.

Mr. Deakin is committed to a comprehensive scheme of local defence and imperial training. These are the loosely laid foundations on which a new experiment in empire building is being attempted.

Exchange of Ideas.

The colonial office, with its admiralty and military advisers, cannot safely employ any form of compulsion in obtaining financial assistance from the colonies for naval construction. A veto upon taxation without representation was imposed after Yorktown, and the unjustifiable claim has never been revived.

Neither Mr. Deakin's plan nor any variant of it can be adopted without organization of an imperial council. British experts may train the colonial contingents and the colonial contingents and the imperial fleets may become interchangeable and under centralized control; but as soon as grants are voted regularly in the colonial capitals and both money and men are supplied for common defence, there will have to be a permanent representative body for arrangements of a deliberative council, but representation will become inevitable as soon as the money is found by the colonies. The need for such a council will be more urgent when contributions are not compulsory, but entirely voluntary. It will mark the beginning of imperial federation—a comprehensive policy tentatively and
