Tests Made of Auto-Gyro Prove Very Successful

MANY PROBLEMS

oanish Inventor Optimist Over Machines Now Under Construction

By KEITH JONES

Urited Press LONDON, July 22-British aeronautical experts who have witnessed the performance of the new auto-gyro or "windmill" airplane designed by Senor de la Cierva, the Spanish inventor, are looking forward to the approaching day of the flying automobile. Cierva himself, and A. V. Roe, head of the airplane concern which has just completed one new auto-gyro to the order of the British Air Ministry and order of the British Air Ministry and is at work on two others, are both optimistic that airplane design is at last on the right track of the development of a machine that can land safely on a country road or a tennis court. The question of vertical ascent, however, has yet to be solved.

From the point of view of the development of a flying automobile in the near future, much depends upon experiments which will be conducted, at outhampton in August with a SECTION OF THE PROOF OF THE P outhampton in August with a 25-35 orsepower auto-gyro now in course of

LONG STRIDES MADE.

Stations—Flowers Showered on Them

"If it is as successful as we expect it to be," said Clerva in an interview with the United Press, "long strides will have been taken in the direction of the development of a flying automobile, for the difficult problem of a safe and practically vertical landing from any height will have been solved. There yet remains, however, the problem of vertical ascent.

"This admittedly presents a number of problems that we have not yet solved, but theoretically, at any rate, if the same power which now causes the machine to rise by dragging it through the air with a tractor propeller, were applied directly to rotating the overhead vanes of the auto-gyro, the whole machine would rise vertically. This transference of the power from the propeller to the vanes constitutes the next stage of experimentation with the auto-gyro and if we succeed the day of the safe flying automobile will definitely have arrived."

From the moment the American film stars crossed the Polish frontier they were greeted everywhere by crowds desiring to see the famous couple, and everywhere flowers were showered upon them. Miss Pickford sent great masses of the flowers presented to her to the Warsaw hospitals.

TRAVEL VERY FAST

This means that their tips are traveling through the air at well over 200 miles an hour, at which speed they exert a tremendous lift per square foot of surface. When the motor stops and the machine commences to descend the downward motion of the pressure against the vanes with the result sin a continuation of the pressure against the vanes with the result shat they continue to spin and the machine floats downward in much the same manner and at much the same way that an ordinary airplane is landed.

Cierva said that he was not yet making any definite plans, but that he hoped to demonstrate the machine in the land of the machine in the land of the pressure of the same way that an ordinary airplane is landed.
