A PAIRCAPE COD CANAL IS MORE THAN THREE QUARTERS COMPLETED

Boston, March 25.—The Cape Cod canal is about 78 per cent completed. For four miles inland from the Cape Cod Bay, or eastern end of the canal the full depth of twenty-five feet at low tide has been dredged. On the Buzzards Bay end the full depth has been dredged inland as far as three-quarters of a mile east of the Bourne highway bridge. Then for a half mile further east a depth of 15 feet has been reached. From that point to the completed part of the Cape Cod Bay end a depth of 10 feet has been reached. From bay to bay the canal is about eight miles long. Its bottom width at the narrowest point will be 100 feet. It will be 25 feet deep at low water and more than 30 feet at high tide—enough to float most coastwise craft.

PROFESSOR KILLS HIMSELF

Stanford, Conn., March 25.—Harry Thurston Peck, formerly a professor at Columbia University, and an author who wrote magazine articles under several names, committed suicide at a rooming house here by shooting in the head with a revolver.

Mr. Peck had been in ill health. A year ago he was in hospital in Hingham, N. Y., in dire straits from mental breakdown, and his first wife, Mrs. Cornelia Dabham Peck, went to him and brought him to her cottage at Sound Beach near here. Through the summer she nursed him, and in the fall he had so far recovered mental strength and bodily vigor as to be able to resume literary work. During the winter Professor Peck had lived at Sound Beach, Riverside, and had taken rooms in this city in Bell street. It was at the last named place that he killed himself. Persons in the house heard a pistol report, and they found the body, a revolver in one hand.

Don't drink dust—Drink "Salada" pure, clear, whole leaf Tea. Salada packets only, by all responsible grocers.

It Was Puzzling

"Um, yes! Ah! Um!" remarked the medico in his best bedside manner to his patient, as they stood in the consulting room. "I'll give you the following prescription." And he handed him the small packages.

The patient opened them, and read the directions: "A powder for my headache," he said aloud, "a pellet for my liver," he continued, "and a capsule for my gouty foot." Then he stopped, and pondered deeply. "I'm a doctor," he queried, "how'll the little beggars know the right place to go when they get inside?"

Best production yet Imperial tonight.

OAK POINT AS ST. JOHN AUXILIARY FOR WINTER PORT

"From the official returns it appears that the St. Croix river is very much less affected by thick weather than other parts of the coast on the Bay of Fundy, and apparently there is little or no fog during the five winter months, November to March, inclusive."

The report here gives a brief description of the town of St. Andrews, St. John's, New Brunswick, Me., and Calais, Me. It refers to hydro-electric power in the vicinity of St. John's, and to other power privileges further up the river. Present railway connections are also referred to. The report goes on to say:

"In considering the St. Croix River for shipping purposes, one of the possible auxiliaries to St. John, from particularly for the extensive traffic during the winter months, it seems to have many attractions, such as: It is some fifty miles nearer the mouth of the Bay of Fundy than St. John. The distance from Montreal to St. John by C. P. R. is 488 miles. The distance from Montreal to St. John, N. B., by the C. P. R., is 488 miles or thereabouts, and in the future a branch line is constructed from Montreal to St. John, N. B., this would shorten the distance from Montreal to St. John to 410 miles. The St. Croix River, which empties into the Bay of Fundy, is a comparatively shallow waterway, never closed by ice and protected from the swell of the Bay of Fundy by numerous islands near the mouth, and as there is deep water to the shore to the right of the river and bay practically no dredging whatever would be necessary to form a shipping channel. Leading lights for the guidance of shipping by night would, of course, have to be provided—probably some joint agreement regarding cost of same could be made with the United States."

Oak Point Terminus

"Assuming therefore, that the river offers reasonably attractive facilities for shipping, the question arises as to what part of the river should be developed first; whether St. Andrews ought to be the terminal or some point further inland, and I have no hesitation whatever in recommending that, because of its geographical position as being the furthest point inland suitable for deep water navigation, Oak Point, overlooking Oak Bay, should be selected for terminal. Oak Bay is a magnificent site reached by a comparatively straight stretch of river nine miles further inland than St. Andrews with ample room for swinging and excellent accommodation for the construction of terminal facilities. In addition to which there is already the town of St. Stephen a short distance off, with numerous industries moderately large, and rapidly increasing population, and varied commercial activity, affording an absolutely certain considerable amount of traffic the whole year round the moment accommodation is provided. The land at Oak Point
