COUNTY SHERIFF IN CITY HALL, CARLETON

Large Audience Enjoys First Professional Performance There in Many Years

For the first time in many years a dramatic performance by a professional company was witnessed in the auditorium of the Carleton City Hall last evening. The event recalled the days when many excellent companies appeared on this stage and received generous support from the people of Carleton. Last evening's performance was a production of The County Sheriff, by an excellent company under the direction of Wee and Lambert, and their appearance was welcomed by an audience which packed the hall.

The scene of the play is laid in the western states and the plot centres around the adventures of the sheriff and the cattle rustler. The play is an interesting one with plenty of dramatic action which is set in relief by some good comedy work. It was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience whose appreciation was shown by generous applause.

Edward Keane, in the character of Happy Hazard, the sheriff, played an exciting role with great spirit and was given a fine reception. Miss Dora Young, as the wife of the cattle rustler, won the sympathy and appreciation of the audience and proved a great favorite. Another member of the company who secured a marked success was Miss Mabelle Leventon, who did some clever character work as Tuesday Paulson, just from Sweden. The other members of the company, including Evelyn Morrison, Harry Thorpe, Frank Wilson, Lotus Hubbard, J. F. Kelley, Joe Lyonnell, Bert James and A. T. Myers, all contributed to a well balanced performance.

Some clever specialities were introduced during the action of the play by Miss Leventon and Mr. Lyonnell and were received with marked favor.

The performance will be repeated this evening, when another full house is expected.

HOTELS OF WORLD

Experiences Met With in Many Countries

SOME COMPARISONS

In India the Servants Sleep on Floor Outside Bedroom Doors — Memories of the Philippines Not All Pleasant

(London Daily News). Mr. and Mrs. Matheson Lang, who are now playing at the Palladium in Miss Peggy Webling's clever historical play, "Westward Ho!" (founded on Charles Kingsley's novel of the same name), are among the most travelled of modern theatrical celebrities.

They have stayed at hotels in all parts of the world, and their experiences have been, on the whole, much more satisfactory than that of Madame Yvette Guilbert, who lately hanged hotel-keepers on their shortcomings.

"The only time that we have had any trouble regarding baths," said Mrs. Matheson Lang (Miss Fanny Britton), when a "Daily News and Leader" representative saw her in her dressing-room at the Palladium, was in Burma (which had no real baths, only a tub in which we stood up and threw water over ourselves) and at a large hotel in the South of France.

Our request for a hot bath seemed to throw the whole house into a state of consternation, and when we walked into the bathroom, I think all the domestic staff were gathered together in the corridor watching me. It was slightly embarrassing.

"We have just returned from a long tour, during which we visited, among other places, America, Australia, Africa, India, China, and the Philippine Islands. The American hotels are gorgeous— a little too magnificent for actual comfort perhaps—and one gets tired of the eternal green marble and bronze, which is so universal over there for hotel decoration. The telephone system in these hotels is also rather a nuisance. They ring you up by telephone in the morning to wake you, and won't stop ringing until you answer them. My husband contrived quite an ingenious device—a tube brought round from the telephone to his bed, by which he was able to answer them and then go to sleep again. Everything is beautifully clean in the American hotels, and each bedroom has its bathroom, but everything is frightfully expensive.

Kindly Australia.

"There is a more 'human' touch about the Australian hotels, I think. You do not feel that you are number 68 or 69—only that and nothing more—as the Americans make you feel. You are treated as a human being. The Australian waiters take a kindly and friendly interest in you, and remember your little facts."

Nothing struck Mrs. Matheson Lang about the African hotels she visited, but their luxury and up-to-dateness, and the frequent beauty of their situation.

"What was the weirdest experience I had?" echoed Mrs. Matheson Lang with a laugh. "I think it was seeing the Indian servants sleeping outside the bedroom doors in a big Bombay hotel. I will never forget the first night I arrived. All along the corridor were what looked like sacks outside each door. When I found they were real live people, it gave me a rather 'creepy' feeling."

"No personal attendance is provided in Bombay or Calcutta hotels, and each person has his or her own servant. I engaged a most delightful little young widow to be my maid. When she arrived, I gave her £5 or so and asked her to get some white clothes for herself and to bring me back the change. The clothes ought not to have cost her more than £1 or so, but when she came back she had no change to give me. The white clothes cost all that I had given her, she declared. Next morning, when she came to wake me, my eyes were dazzled by her magnificence. A most imposing turban on her head, strings of brilliant beads round her neck, her arms covered with bangles (Oriental and British), including a little watch-bracelet, which must have been made in Calcutta, well, I saw where my money had gone, but I was too amused to say anything. The extraordinary simplicity of her mind struck me. She obviously never dreamed that I would see any connection between her new splendor and my vanished money."

The Artist Servant in India.

"There is another admirable point about Indian servants—their artistic skill in table decorations. They make the most lovely designs in colored rice. I remember one evening we gave a supper party after 'Hamlet,' but did not give any special orders regarding decoration. When we returned to the hotel we found the table-dish most wonderfully ornamented with weird and fantastic designs in dyed rice in red, green, yellow, and other bright colors. In the centre was an extraordinary presentation of Hamlet fashioned out of rice—a red Hamlet with a green and yellow border."

Mrs. Matheson Lang's memories of the Philippine Islands are not very pleasant. They had to fly from one place in the middle of the night—the close proximity of an open drain was too much for them.

Chicago Makes Strides Towards Purity
Chicago, May 2.—Agitation against the "Smut song" has borne fruit in an ordinance introduced in the council forbidding the singing of "any song, the words of which are suggestive of indecency or immorality."

The council passed the ordinance prohibiting the exhibition, in show windows of a picture portraying an undraped figure. This ordinance was introduced when the city failed to secure the services of an art dealer for displaying a replica of Chabaz's painting, "September Morn."
