GALEA WANTS BETTER CITY GOVERNMENT
 (Banor Commercial)
 According to present indications there will be considerable activity in political circles during the opening months of the spring campaign, and when the times come it will not be surprising if the voters are given an opportunity to cast their votes for a citizens' organization, composed of the younger men of the community and representing both political parties.

Matters have not been satisfactory to the greater number of citizens during the past year, and it is said that an effort will be made to see what a non-partisan board can do in the matter of conducting the affairs of the city. The strange part of the whole affair is that those taking an active part in the proceedings are Republicans, but a number of Democrats have signified their willingness to co-operate with their political rivals. Others in the city favor a commission form of government, but it is doubtful if the citizens as a whole would be agreeable to this radical change. Whether form the agitation may assume it is safe to predict that there will be something doing when the campaign actually opens.

AGGRESS SEEMS TO PREVENT THE SALE
 Mrs. Carter Applies for Injunction Against Disposing of Seized Personal Articles as Her Property

New York, Jan. 30.—Mrs. Leslie Carter Payne, has applied to Supreme Court Justice Gerard for an injunction restraining John L. Charwick and John E. Davis, proprietors of the Stratford house, from selling or advertising for sale a large number of personal articles as her property. The articles were taken under a landlord's lien of $2.00.

Mrs. Carter said in an affidavit that the articles include towels with a crest, a handkerchief, a pair of gloves, a Greek coin, a complex powder, garters, ankle bangles, a silk wrapper, lace-trimmed bed and pillow cases, a pair of shoes, six pairs of shoes, an eyebrow pencil, crimson, side comb, two gold bracelets and a number of picture hats.

The affidavit declares that she does not owe the house anything, and says that no part of the property about to be sold under the lien of the Stratford house, was her property, and that she left no personal effects behind her when she went away from the hotel.

Her husband, William Louis Payne, says the articles do not belong to his wife, but to her mother, Catherine Dudley, and to her son, Dudley Carter. Her attorney, Herman Joseph, says the articles were taken long before her mother and son died, and that the bill was contracted by them subsequent to her death.

Cyrus C. Wells, counsel for the defendant, said in an affidavit, that among other articles left behind by Mrs. Carter was a pencil portrait of her former manager, David Belasco, on which was written "Seeing it's you, faithfully, David Belasco."

The portrait also bore the words "Until tomorrow, always yours, your true devoted friend, Leslie Carter."

"Why should it be advertised as Mrs. Carter-Payne's property?" asked Justice Gerard.

"Because it is her property," said Mr. Wells.

"Why use her name at all?" continued the court. "Why not simply sell the property?"

"Seeing it's you, faithfully, David Belasco," the law requires that the name of the owner be used," replied the lawyer.

"Then you could advertise it simply as the property of Caroline L. C. Payne," suggested the court.

"We have a right to advertise it as we want to," said the lawyer.

"Then you are going to hold a souvenir sale," "No," just a sale," replied Mr. Wells.

In arguing that Mrs. Carter was entitled to her inheritance, her counsel said: "Imagine her indignation and shock if, after the sale, she should see some of these articles advertised and exposed in a show window as the property of and worn by Mrs. Leslie Carter, the great actress."

The court reserved decision.
