the night.

In the morning I told the manager how lonely I was. He urged me very kindly to remain, assuring me that the loneliness would soon wear away.

The next night or near morning, rather, I was awakened by some one trying to get into the room. Rising on my elbow, I plainly saw the door knob turn, but the door was securely bolted, and there were no further demonstrations. I was frightened almost crash, and in jumped two policemen

'Have no more fears; you will be safer here than at home. Whenever you feel that you are in danger call No. 122 the central police station, only three blocks away, and when they reply you have only to say, 'This is the central office. Doctor Bangs is dead and his wife has discontinued the telephone.

That will bring an officer at once.

I felt better then, but I felt better still when I talked with the police over the wire and found that it was all right.
'Don't be afraid,' said the chief;

'Don't be afraid,' said the chief, when Dr. Bangs dies, the boys will come at once to the funeral;' and then COFFINS & CASKETS he laughed at my timidity.
So things went better. The little sum I was making with what mother earned taking in sewing—I wouldn't let her go out—enabled us to live comfortably.

Several months went by and I became accustomed to the business. I generally slept until noon, and then I had the rest of the day to myself. to ride, and once or twice on off nights he accompanied me to the theatre. But I didn't think much of his attentions; Several times the manager took me he took some of the other girls out, teo, I never thought a gentleman like him, well born, and highly connected, could care much for a drunkard's daughter. But I came to like his at-tentions. Than too he was always a tentions. Then, too, he was always so kind and polite to mother. But there are always changes in this world. The manager's father died, leaving him a large and valuable farm near the city. He at once resigned his position, and the night he left he shook my hand warmly, and—yes, he held my hand quite a long time.

'I have much on my mind, now,' he said, 'but in a few days I want to see wou again.'

'Why, of course, you can see me at any time,' I said carelessly.

He looked straight into my eyes, but I pretended to have a call to answer and ran away from him. When I look, ed around he was gone. I did feel lonesome then, for he had been very kind to me.

The new manager I did not like. Sometimes he found fault with me, and I feared he'd put his cousin into my place, as soon as he could find an ex-

Fillemup's saloon.

'Well, what do you want?'

'Send the patrol waggon at once.
That was all, I pondered awhile, and tried to read. Soon another call came;

'Are you in earnest!' came back over

"Are you in earnest! came back over the wire."

"I am in earnest! My God! What else could I s-y?

"I am in earnest!" My God! What else could I s-y?

Just then the tramp blurted out in his hoarse voice -poor fool, he did not know the calls come only at rare inervals.

I lay down and slept a little, having attached the going so that if a call came it would awake me, and thus I passed

In the morning I told the manager of my fright, and that I did not think I could muster up courage to remain alone another night.

Why did you not call the police station, he said; 'that is what the police are for.'

'Because I feared the prowlers would hear me, and burst in the door.'

'Now see here, Miss Lottie,' said he, 'we have hard work to get good girls to fill your position. You just stay and I will arrange a cypher with the police or a mutually understood signal that will bring them at any time.'
