Fortune and Bride Await Missing Man.

American Sweetheart of Lieutenant Becker.

FIGURES IN GERMAN ROMANCE.
When relatives interfered with his plans to wed the daughter of an American silk manufacturer, Lieutenant Albert Becker resigned from the German army and came to this country. He has now disappeared and his sweetheart, as well as his sister, the Baroness von Kaskel, are searching for him. Another suitor of the American girl, Baron von Raszkowski, is in this country.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—A fortune, a true-blue sweetheart, a devoted sister and a rich father-in-law all await Albert Becker, a former lieutenant in the German army, but now numbered among the great army of the missing in America.

Becker won the heart of the girl, who is the daughter of a millionaire American silk manufacturer, about eight years ago in Berlin. He was then a lieutenant in the Kaiser's army, but the millionaire objected on account of his poverty. He immediately resigned, and left for America to earn his fortune.

Left behind was his sister, Baroness von Kaskel, who has inherited the entire family estates, the brother being cut off because of waywardness in his younger years.

Since Becker's departure for America absolutely no word has been heard from him, save a short note to the effect that he was acting as translator for a firm in Chicago. He left this position and vanished from sight.

The sweetheart's health has been affected by Becker's absence, and now her father is ready to receive the young man into his family. The sister, Baroness von Kaskel, is so grief-stricken that she wants to give the estates she inherited to her brother, who having married a very wealthy landholder in the old country.

High-priced detectives have been employed to hunt Becker, his sweetheart standing the expense. The young woman's name is being withheld by the detectives until they are certain of Becker's fate.

Way was a quiet and industrious man, well liked by all who came in contact with him. No trace of the weapon by which he was killed has been discovered, nor of his wallet and money. The attorney general has been communicated with by Hon. Jason M. Mack, the crown prosecutor, and will be asked to furnish a detective to further investigate the affair. Spears was arraigned before John Allen, county stipendiary magistrate, this p. m. and remanded for seven days for a further examination. The accused is twenty-six years of age.

Late this evening Albert Wambolt, a resident in the upper part of the town, reported to the chief of police that at a thick man with dark moustache came out of the woods in a drenched condition asking for the jail, he knew the prisoner and of the murder. After considerable search Chief Power succeeded in getting this man, a Portuguese, and he was taken to the jail, where he was held for a few days. He had a ticket for here, and was several days on the road. He will be brought up for examination tomorrow.

ACCUSED WAS VICTIM'S CHUM Prisoner for Shelburne Murder Pleads Innocence

Evidence Against Him Seems Slight—Portuguese Stranger Also Under Suspicion

LIVERPOOL, N. S., Oct. 31.—Clarence L. Spears, who was arrested at Shelburne yesterday by Chief Power, charged with the murder of Edward Way, at Mitchell's Brook and brought here last night, is a Portuguese. He was employed at Brownell's lumber camp, near Grate village, and for a time was in the employ of the Halifax and S. W. Railway. He was a chum of Way's and a few days before the murder had borrowed five dollars from him and was frequently a visitor at Way's shack, which was on the line of railway, about a mile toward Grate village, where the road to the lumber camp leaves that of the railway.

About dusk on Saturday Spears left the camp for Sable, a distance of six or seven miles, arriving there at nine that night taking nearly four hours to make a journey usually covered in two.

The police suspect that when he got off at the lumber road instead of proceeding towards Sable River, which is west of Grate Village, he turned east to visit Way at his shack.

It is now evident that Way came to his death before supper time on Saturday, as provisions left with him in the morning were scarcely touched, and particularly a pie that had been sent to him from the cook house had only one piece out of it. The wood neatly piled for the purpose of a fire was made up and had not been slept in. It is surmised that the murder took place Saturday at dusk.

Spears was arrested at Brownell's lumber camp yesterday afternoon by Chief Power, and protested his innocence, stating that he did not see Way at all on Saturday. When questioned as to why he spent so much time on the road to Sable, he replied that he did not hurry, but went straight along the railway, not turning east to Way's shack.

Way was a quiet and industrious man, well liked by all who came in contact with him. No trace of the weapon by which he was killed has been discovered, nor of his wallet and money. The attorney general has been communicated with by Hon. Jason M. Mack, the crown prosecutor, and will be asked to furnish a detective to further investigate the affair. THE CIRCULAR SADDY.

The Star's New Series of Short Stories.

FIVE SMALL SPANGLES

Of his sanity up to the day of his master's death there was no question; but more than one man with whom he had had dealings was ready to testify that there had been a change in his manner for the past few weeks—a sort of subdued excitement, quite unlike his former methodical bearing. He had shown an inclination to testiness, and was less easily pleased than formerly. To one clerk he had even given a nasty spirit under very slight provocation, and was only endured in the store on account of his master, who was too good a customer for them to offend. Mr. Kelly, a grocer, went to the store to buy a few things, and with a grievance who burned to vent his spite on some one, but held himself in for a time.

Perhaps if no tragedy had taken place in the house on that street these various persons would have been so ready to interpret this unfavorably nervous excitement enough in one cut off from all communication with his kind. But with violent end of his master in view, and his own unexplained connection with it, who would help him to recall that his stance had frequently shown malice?

But this was not evidence of the decided character required by the law, and Mr. Gryce was about to regard the day as a lost one, when Sweetwater made his reappearance at headquarters. The expression of his face put new life into Mr. Gryce.

"What?" he cried, "you have not found her?"

Sweetwater smiled. "Don't ask me, sir, not yet. I've seen her, but I haven't seen her for a long time. I don't know where she is, but I'll bring it back to you, I'll bring it back to you, I'll bring it back to you."

"What test, my boy? May I ask, what test?"

"Please to excuse me, sir; I have only a short time in which to act before respectable business hours close for the night, and the test I speak of has to be made in a respectable house."

"Then you shall not be hindered. Wait here, and I will bring you the parcel. There'll bring it back soon, my boy. I'll bring it back to you, I'll bring it back to you, I'll bring it back to you."

"An hour, sir; give me an hour, and then—"

The shutting of the door behind his flying figure cut short his sentence. That was a long hour, Mr. Gryce, who would have been if it had not been for the return of Sweetwater in an even more excited state of mind than he had been before. He held the parcel in his hand.

"My test failed," said he, "but the parcel has brought me luck, notwithstanding. I have found the lady, and she is here."

He had to draw a long breath before proceeding.

"And she is what I said," began the detective; "a respectable person in a respectable house."

"Yes, sir, very respectable, more respectable than I expected to see. Quite a lady, sir. Not young, but—"

"Sweetwater shook his head with a look as naive in its way as the old detective's question.

"I cannot say, sir. Indeed, I had not the courage to ask. She is here."

"Here!" Mr. Gryce took one hurried step toward the door, then came gravely back. "I can restrain myself."

"If she is here, she is in my power. I'll have seen her. Are you sure you have made no mistake; that she is the woman we are after? Is it Evelyn?"

Sweetwater shook his head with a look as naive in its way as the old detective's question.

"I cannot say, sir. Indeed, I had not the courage to ask. She is here."
