Good Progress Made In Supply

Hn. Mr. Fielding said he could not undertake to outline any general policy on the subject, but at present the work could not be done in the bureau. He did not like to make any rash statement as to the future.

On the vote for the high commissioner's office, Hon. Mr. Fielding said there was no foundation for the report that a successor to Lord Strathcona was to be appointed. He was happy to say Lord Strathcona improving in health and strength, and hoped he would long be spared to disharse his duties. Hon. Mr. Mulock, replying to Mr.

Maclean, said he would announce the government's policy in regard to letter carriers at a later date. Appropriations for the department of justice were then taken up. Mr. Haggart asked what was the policy of the government with respect to judges.

Mr. Fitzpatrick said he did not think that question had been considered at all. The other day reference has made to the retirement of certain county court judges. The suggestion was made that judges after 20 or 25 years of services, when they had the end of February. might be retired on full pay. He did not think that a man who had served his country for 20 or 25 years should be forced to retire without some consideration. (Hear, hear.) With regard to high court judges there was a constitutional difficulty. It was extremely doubtful under the terms of the B. N. A. Act whether these judges could be interfered with in any way. It had been suggested that provision might be made when high court judges had attained a certain age, that they might be allowed to re tire on full pay if they desired to do so, but the act must be purely voluntary on the part of the judge himself.

Mr. Haggart challenged the correctness of the opinion of Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick that parliament could not interfere with high court judges. He believed the judges were too well paid. The real trouble was there were too many judges.

I've married a dozen costers to a dozen or rearing girls.

I've reserted a brat from his mother and bathed the blood from his curls;

And now I have bolted my dinner—your pudding no praise can tell!

The bettle of port from your father came out of its journey well;

And now I am free of the parish, I'm smoking my day's first pipe,

To write you a Christmas letter—in an odor of gin and tripe!

Ah me! but forgive this "grousing." I fret like a man grown old;
I could fight with the hosts of Legion, but not with Hunger and Cold;
I could fight with hell and its devils, but not with the pitiless laws

But peace! While the smoke curls upward I dream of the days to come, when my back will be turned forever on dog-hole, kennel and slum; when far from the gutters of London—this odor of hollands and tripe!—

In a rectory clematis-covered I shall pull at my marital pipe.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Sophia Beach, 61 years of age, a guest of the Park Avenue Hotel, who was burned about the face and body Saturday morning, died in Belleveau hospital today as the result of her injuries. This makes the nineteenth victim. All the other fire victims in the different hospitals will probably recover.

The ruins of the 71st Regiment armory and the scorched upper stories of the Park Avenue Hotel, were gazed at today by thousands of people. A single fire engine sent a stream of water on one spot of the armory ruins, where were stored 50,000 rounds of cartridges and a small quantity of powder. The head of the fire did not explede this ammunition, for it was in a sub-cellar packed in steel boxes. The other ammunition in the armory was all exploded while the fire burned, with terrible results.

District Attorney Jerome arrived at the hotel in the morning, acompanied by half a dozen county dectectives and Fire Chief Croker. They examined the burned portion of the hotel.

He eluded the latter and took rail for unknown regions, and the appointed day found the gentleman conspicuous by his absence. The young man had also wooed the Sydney maiden, and information having reached her of his approaching marriage, she lost no time in coming to prevent it.
