

THE TOLL HOUSE, LOWER SANDGATE ROAD.

The Lower Sandgate Road, which runs along the base of the cliffs, is fringed on either side by winding paths—those on the land side shaded by pines, and on the seaward side are well-kept gardens. The road is the private road of Lord Radnor, and the picturesque toll-house preserves it from heavy and objectionable traffic. In the season open-air music is provided in the beautifully laid out gardens between the Lower Road and the sea.

OLD FOLKESTONE.

From a painting by R. Kerr.