First Place Poetry Winner:
KARYN MCKNIGHT

MEMPHIS SYMPHONY

In the mind-dimension
of parakeet journalists,
a velvet Elvis lives.
He fathers a worthy heir,
who croons a tune-noodle
about the insect-ticker
that flicks
below
his wollop.

KARYN MCKNIGHT is in her third year of Creative Writing at York. "Memphis Symphony" is her first published poem, except for some that got printed when she was a little kid but those don't count.

MICHAEL REDHILL (a.k.a. Brian Taft) is a York film student, edits Yak, and won the 1988 National Poetry Contest.

Second Place Poetry Winner:

INTERSTATE

A fly's engine disturbs
the night, pulls off the cape
he was dreaming.
The walls of the motel
fall into place.

He is slipping
into urban myth —
afraid he is like
so many other night itinerants

like the army sergeant who popped diet pills and broke his children into bits.
A foreign base.
Far from here.

On interstate 221. Anyone could go crazy like this.
So many movies are crowding his brain.

Now this world shrunk little between the wings of Diptera Muscidae. He can't chase it in this darkness.
He gets back into his van.
3am.
