Toronto, Ontario.

My dear Mr. King:

Your letter, written on Good Friday, reached me the day after the announcement of your sister's death on Easter Sunday. You and yours have been very constantly in my mind during these past few days. I have felt special anxiety concerning your father and mother, for at their age and in their delicate health, a great sorrow sometimes has most serious results, but reassured by their courage and their faith, I believe they will have the strength to resist this great sorrow.

What you have written of your work in Colorado and of your success there is most gratifying and interesting to me. This beginning is an earnest of the great good you seem destined to bring to the miners and their families in that state. I believe the power has been given
