INTRODUCTION.

Within the past few years the farmers of Canada have worked hard to secure surplus food materials to be shipped to the Allies. The present demand is as great or even greater to furnish food to millions of people in Europe, many of whom are at the point of starvation.

In the United States Year Book for 1916 an article entitled "A Graphic Summa of World Agriculture" contains some interesting information. For three years previous to the war, viz., 1911, 1912 and 1913, estimates were made regarding production of food materials from farm crops in the principal agricultural countries of the world. The following table is based on the information gleaned from this article:—
