SNAKE'S TASTE IN MUSIC.

Rapture Shown by a Serpent Over One of Chopin's Nocturnes. "During our first year in Colorado id the ex-ranchman's wife, "my daug wife, "my daughsaid the ex-ranchman's wife, "my daughter and myself were desperately lonesome, and for the girl's sake more than for my own I urged my husband to try his utmost and get a piano brought there.
A Colorado ranch was then much farther from any point of civilization than it is today, and for a long time the feat seemed hopeless, but at last, after long and tedious effort, an instrument found its was to our wilderness its way to our wilderness.

"My daughter had a fairly good musical education before we went to the ranch, and after the arrival of the piano she spent all her leisure time at it. One evening, about two weeks after it came, she had spent a couple of hours practic-ing some of Chopin's waltzes; then she struck into the nocturnes. Chopin is my favorite among the composers. While I sat there listening intently, my elbow resting on a table beside me and my head resting on a table beside me and my head on my hand. I felt newself impelled to go to the window and look out. I had heard no sound, everything was as still as death, but there was just a consciousness that something was outside.

"I moved cautiously, peered out slowly and drew back suddenly. A huge snake was relied was clear under the window.

was coiled up close under the window. Its body was perfectly still, its head poised in a listening attitude and swaying slightly from side to side, as if in rhythmic movement with the music. I did not see this all at once. I took in the situation after I returned to the window and stood there watching the creature out of range of his eye and wondering if my presence would make itself felt and divert its interest from the music. But no; I don't believe even speech would have roken the spell. The creature seemed dazed, entranced, fascinated!
"After watching him for a time 1 went quietly over to my daughter and without startling her by so much as a hint of my strange discovery I asked her to desist for a few moments from the minor and semiweird notes she was playing and strike into one or two lively airs. She did so, while I returned and watched the

"After a couple of minutes of the rattling music the snake began to grow rest-ive. It reared its head, beat it from side to side and showed other symptoms of restlessness or anger. The music kept on; the snake began to writhe and shiver as if in distress; finally it uncoiled and glided away out of sight in the under-

"When I told my discovery to the male portion of the family, they were all ready to watch for that snake and kill him at the first opportunity, but I forbade that, I desired to make a further study of his love of music, and I did so. I prepared my daughter to look for his advent again, and his snakeship did not disappoint us. Again and again we watched him creep to his musical rendezvous, and again and again we tested the quality of his musical tastes. We proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that low, sweet music, minor, sad or weird notes, fascinated that snake, and that anything lively or noisy repelled him. "I grew positively interested in the study and even found myself bestowing a sort of human pity on the reptile, but it resulted in no good, for the other mem-bers of the family did not share my feelings, and I must finish my story by say-ing that the creature's love for Chopin's octurnes cost him his life during one of his visits under our window."

A Liar's Truth.

Two commercial travelers, one from Atherstone and one from New York, were discussing the weather in their respective countries. The Englishmen said that English weather had one great fault

-its sudden changes.
"A person may take a walk some day," "attired in a light summer suit and still feel quite warm. Next day he needs an overcont."

"That's nothing," said the American "My two triends Johnson and Jones were once having an argument, There were eight or nine inches of snow on the ground. The argument got heated, and ground. The argument got heated, and Johnson sicked up a snowball and threw it at Jones from a distance of not more than five yards. During the transit of that snowball, believe me or not, as you like, the weather suddenly changed and became hot and summerlike, and Jones, instead of being hit with a snowball, was er-scalded with hot water."

Although plain boiled rice is the foun-dation of all rice cooking, few people understand how to obtain the best results. Properly cooked, each kernel should remain separate and unbroken should remain separate and unbroken and should swell to three times its origi-nal size. First wash the rice in two waters to remove the superfluous starch, allowing it to stand in the last water for four or five minutes. One-half cupful of rice will require two quarts of water and two teaspoonfuls of sait. Bring the sait-ed water to a toil and drop the rice into it gradually so as not to step its boiling. Boil rapidly for 20 minutes without stirring. Then drain through a colander, rinse with cold water (through the colander), shake it free from the water, return it to the saucepan and let it stand un-covered on the back of the stove for five minutes. This is the basis of all rice

The World's Oldest Rosebush. The oldest rosebush in the world is at Hildersheim, an old town in Hanover, It was planted more than 1,000 years ago by Charlemagne in commemoration of a visit made to him by the embassador of the caliph Haroun-al-Raschid of "Arabian Nights" fame. After it had become a flourishing vine a cathedral was built over it, the date of the building being doubtful. It is known, however, that doubtful. It is known, however, that a coffin shaped vault was built around its sacred roots in the year 818, the vault and bush surviving a fire which destroyed the cathedral in 1146. The bush is now said to be 26 feet high and to cover 31 feet of the wall. The stem, after 1.000 years' growth, is only two inches in diam ster.

THE NEW JOURNALIST. His Remarks on Lynching Cause

"I was in the newspaper business once myself," laughed the portly party. "When I left college, I decided that nothing but journalism would cater to the strenuous life that I proposed to lead. In looking over the situation I realized that the eastern field was too cramped for my swelling ambition, so I decided apon the free and boundless west as the only spot where my budding genius could properly expand unhampered by the conventionali-ties of the effete east.

"Well, I found a small town in the west where there was no paper and pro-ceeded at once to fill a long felt want. Soon after I had established my great molder of opinion a Jynching took place, and I felt that the situation called for a few burning words upon the subject. The result was a two column leader, wherein I handled the outrage without gloves. I cannot now recall what I said except the end, which read something like this: 'Gentlemen, think twice before you again drag the name of our beautiful and future great city through the mud.'

"The edition containing my inspired the containing my inspired and burning words was hardly issued when I had a call from a delegation of the Modern Newspaper. "Speaking of the changes which have taken place in the modern newspaper," said a gentleman who keeps up with matters of this sort. "I have been impressed strongly with what I may call the potentiality of the paragraph. Really the paragraph is of more value than many of the other methods devised by men for the purpose of giving emphasis to what is written. The paragraph mark is the thing when it comes to holding an idea out. It beats the old method of using italics, a method, by the way, which is rapidly passing out of existence except among the heavier writers, who want to give prominence to a series of proposi

"So far as the newspaper of today is concerned, italics are rarely seen. The of holding out his strong points by the use of italics, but in the upheavals which have marked the printer's trade during the last few years the use of italics has almost passed. There is probably a reason for it. In the first place, the use of letters of this kind mar to some extent the appearance of the printed page. They break the smoothness of the picture, as it were, and detract much from the appearance of the page.

"But there is another reason to be considered in this connection. Time is the great element in the modern newspaper world. Whatever happens in the print-ing line, as in all other lines at this time, must happen quickly. Except on special occasions there is no reason for any tedious effort at displaying sentences or in giving a bolder appearance to some striking thought in the written matter. Hence there is but little chance for the use of italics. The age is snappy, and the newspaper office of the day is prob-ably the best place to find a full expres-sion of the push and bustle which char-

"So many of the older forms in printing have disappeared in the crash and jam of modern affairs. So the paragraph mode has come to the front as the quick-est and certainly the most forcible method of employing a point. One may string an idea out in a jiffy simply by using this mark and holding the thought boldly, and it is in my judgment the best method of emphasizing ever devised. There is now a noticeable tendency to give the paragraph mark even greater pron in the newspapers and other periodicals, and I accept this innovation as one of the good signs of the times, for I am a firm believer in the potentiality of the para-graph."

A Visit In Sections. When Harriet Beecher Stowe was alive, Mark Twain, who lived near her in Hartford, had a way of running in to converse with her and her daughters, often in a somewhat negligee costume, greatly to the distress of Mrs. Clemens.

One morning as he returned from the Stowes sans necktie Mrs. Clemens met him at the door with the exclamation: "There, Sam, you must have been over "There, Sam, you must have been diverted to the Stowes again without a necktie! It's really disgraceful the way you neglect your dress." Her husband said nothing, but went to his room. A few production later Mrs. Stowe was summonminutes later Mrs. Stowe was summoned to the door by a messenger who presented her with a small box neatly done up. She opened it and found a black silk up. She opened it and found a black silk necktie, accompanied by the following note: "Here is a necktie. Take it out and look at it. I think I staid half an hour this morning. At the end of that time will you kindly return it, as it is the only one I have? Mark Twain."
