PRODUCE MOVED BY RAILWAY.

We present herewith our usually important returns, showing the quantity of flour and grain contributed by each station of the three railways west, north, and north-west of this city. These statements exhibit at a glance the sources from which the supply of produce is drawn. It will be seen that the shipment by rail is yearly on the increase, taking as an example that of Guelph station, from which the Great Western and Grand Trunk have during the year drawn 84,540 barrels of flour and 334,889 bushels of wheat. From Paris the Great Western has taken 99,025 barrels of flour and 665,126 bushels of wheat, being the largest shipping point on any of the roads, excepting Sarnia and Windsor, the shipments of which consist of through grain in transit from the Western States.

The following are the returns of the amount of flour and grain sent over the Great Western Railway and the stations from which it was shipped :—
