"He Was Our Only Boy."
On the night that Harry Lunder sang and joked on the stage, his smiling lips masking a breaking heart, I watched his performance from the wings.
Only those who saw him from the back of the house as well as from the front, realized the full tragedy of the great comedian whose lips he carried in the little cherubian of "Tobacco."
But before the multitude Harry was game, and his humor made them shout with laughter, even as at moments his pluck made their eyes wet with tears.
"Over those footlights," said Harry, "there are other parents who have lost an only son—a the post of duty. Circumstances have thrust a certain amount of publicity upon the death of my boy, but no one realizes more than I do that mine is but one amid thousands of similar sorrows."
And with that he swung on the stage in the glorious colors of his son's regiment, the Argyll and South-land Highlanders, and the house broke down as, with flashing eye, he sang:
"When the war is over, and the fighting's done,
And the boys come home."
A mother sitting in front clutched a little tighter the hand of the boy by her side, and her eyes rested with something of terror on the thin gold stripe above the star on his cuff.
For a moment her eyes closed; the din of the orchestra, the blizz of color on the stage, the laughter of those around her, vanished. Her lips impressed for a second as if in pain, as if then a look of mingled pride and tenderness that belongs only to motherhood.
And he was good to look upon. His healthy tanned face was lighted with a smile, reflecting the galaxy over the footlights; his foot beat time to the lilting melody played.
"Topping, isn't it mother?" he remarked.
She nodded gaily to see his pleased was a pleasure.
But through her brain there ran an image of the light of that first night, stripped them in the race; he had reached the goal, and left older and wearier feet to tread their lonely way without him.
Through hot the land there are these broken fathers and stricken mothers. But I challenge you to point them out, for the face they show to the world reveals little of their grief.
"He did his duty," they say, as they lift their heads.
Thus speak the parents of the only sons, and they voice the spirit of Britain—Hilda M. Love.

Whooping Cough.
Mr. Arthur Livinge, Ashton Farm, Parley, Sask., writes:—Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country, our eight month old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid results. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble as the cough passed off in two or three days.

Roumanian Superstitions.
RAINS BRINGS WEALTH.
It is considered lucky to arrive in Roumania, accompanied by rain. It means abundance, fertility, the hope of a fine harvest—wealth.
Sometimes the peasant women put large wooden buckets full of water before their threshold; a tall vessel is a sign of good luck. They will even sprinkle water before one's feet, because water means abundance. "I have seen," says the Queen of Roumania in an article about the people of her country, "the handsome girls step out to meet me with overflowing water-jars on their heads; on my approach they stood quite still, the water splashing over their faces as so to prove their pretence were full. It is lucky to meet a cart full of corn or straw coming towards one, but an empty cart is a sure sign of ill-luck."

"Yes," she told him, "but things you've never heard of are the same again."
"No, ma'am," he agreed, and he looked up from the scales where he was weighing, "but we wouldn't have kept him back."
"Never! It was his duty!" she said quietly, "And you and I are very proud to-day of our only sons."
There are many tragic figures in this war, but the saddest figures of all are those who bade "God speed" to an only son, and who know that at the great home coming his face will not be among the laddies who fought and won.
Some hoped to give them vast estates, others amassed great fortunes, many struggled and saved and died for their sake, others had sought but the riches of their heart to give. But all set their hopes on the boy given them, and looked to his happy return.

Indigestion Resulted From Bad Case of Inactive Liver
Experience Proved That Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Exactly What Was Needed.

If every sufferer from indigestion would study the case as did the writer of this letter, the great majority would admit that the indigestion and bowels were the cause of their trouble.
It is then an easy step to finding a cure, for there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to awaken the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels. With natural organs performing their normal functions the system is thoroughly cleansed of all poisonous waste matter and the process of digestion is no longer impeded.
Mrs. W. L. Jones, 1011 Spring, Alta., writes: "I have often thought I would write and tell you how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I had a very bad case of indigestion and did not know what was the cause. I got to using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and was so improved that I began to study the matter. I found that the indigestion resulted from a bad case of inactive liver, and as soon as I got the pills working right, I didn't have any stomach trouble or indigestion, the various spells vanished, and the bowels flowed away. I am never sick now, but should the old trouble return, I know how to cure it quickly." There is a whole host of derangements which disappear when the liver is set right. Biliousness, indigestion, headache, irritability, constipation, a few of the more common results of torpid liver action. By the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you can control all such derangements. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Began.
(HANTS JOURNAL.)
Within two years 4,000 millionaires have been added to the 12,000 of the U.S. before the war in Europe. Fortunes of a million have been made overnight, of ten millions in a week or month of a hundred millions in a year or two. The 4,000 millionaires have been added to the 12,000 since the beginning of the European war.
Similar results have occurred in Canada in the same time, according to population, corn, combines and corporations.
The working classes and all sorts of day laborers and their wives and children have been suffering and starving from exorbitant prices for the necessities of life.
A New York paper describes the results as follows: All necessities of life are lifted beyond the reach of the laboring classes, and distress and misery is the result. Children are huddled around cold stoves, and their little stomachs are empty, wives are worn and wan. Christian churches surround the huts and homes of the poor and famishing. Afternoon teas are not far distant where Mrs. Lively pours, Mrs. Jabber roars, Mrs. Dailer bores, Miss Rapsing soars and Miss Embodiment snores.
From the days of Achan, Jacob and the killing of the fatted calf, selfishness has steadily sifted down through the ages, and stalks unshowered over Canada and the U.S. One writer says the difference between a twentieth century hog and a corporate individual, is the hog does not pretend to be a gentleman.
I close with a bit of history. In 1836-7, when stove coal was $10.00 per ton, and flour $12.00 per bbl., butter, eggs, ham, and all sorts of provisions at highest prices, and all the necessary articles of life were held by corners, and corporations in New York, a starving multitude marched out to City Hall Park, bearing banners, reading, "Bread, wheat be heard."

The crowd first marched to Eli Hart's warehouses, where 600,000 bbls. of flour were being held for storage prices. The mob attacked his stores, for he had refused to sell at the old prices. They carried away the barrels of flour to the starving wives and children. At Horrick & Co.'s the mob was so great the militia could do nothing with them; they opened the warehouses, carried off all the flour and everything that was stored, cleaned out everything and took all to their families.
Who will say that this act of the starving multitude was wrong?
The only wonder the same thing is not occurring in America and Canada to-day; for the same selfishness is rampant in both countries. Men are fattening on the blood, death, misery and starvation of their fellowmen.
Dominant militarism, I believe, is to be forever crushed, then will come the crushing out of corners and corporations, the freeing of the poor, the end of political corruption, and the age of humanity.
After Prussian militarism, political debilitation, commercial debasement and financial rascality, are the great crimes in the world. Christianity must prevail if Christianity is true.

London's Oldest Freeman.
SAW WILLIAM IV.
Mr. David Leslie, the oldest freeman and pensioner of the G.I. Ziers Company, recently completed his hundredth year. He was admitted to the freedom in 1839. Full of reminiscences, he recalls how as a boy he saw William IV. and Queen Adelaide sail down the Thames from Westminster to open the new London Bridge. He remembers, too, an exciting incident which occurred one day when Queen Victoria was driving up Constitution Hill with Duchess of Roxburgh. The chest of a sword got between the spokes of one of the wheels. The son of the duchess, who was riding on horseback by the side of the carriage, fell with his horse. He sprang to the rescue, and as he was propped the Royal carriage to see if he could render assistance he was commended by the famous John Brown to "stand back, mon."
Mr. Leslie, who is in excellent health, has never smoked, and long ago gave up taking anything but the smallest quantity of spirits.

Sad Story of Two Starving Belgian Children.
Two little children lost in the pitiable throng of Belgian sufferers held each other tight by the hand. Two little boys, probably brothers, the elder who may have been five or six old, protecting the younger of three or three and a half years, were seen yesterday in a crowd of people. They were shivering and their clothes were soiled and their little stockings were thick and warm, clearly they belonged to a family of careful parents; they were doubtless the sons of one of those unfortunate Belgian soldiers who had fallen heroically on the battlefield, and whose last thought had perhaps been one of supreme tenderness for them. They were not even crying, so overcome were they by fatigue and sleepiness; they could scarcely stand, they could not answer when they were questioned, but they seemed intent, above all, upon keeping a tight hold of each other.
Finally the elder, clasping the little one's hand closely, as if fearing to lose him, seemed to awake to a sense of his duty as a protector, and half asleep already, found strength to say in a suppliant tone to the R. d. Cross lady bending over him, "Madame are they going to put us to bed now?" For the moment this was all they hoped for from human pity, to be put to bed.
They were put to bed at once together, of course, still holding each other tightly by the hand, and nestling one against the other, they fell at the same moment into the tranquil unconsciousness of childish slumber.

Alcohol in Extract of Malt.
At a recent meeting of the committee of the London (England) United Temperance Council it was reported that the excise authorities had objected to a certain form of selling a "malt extract" without a magistrate's license.
The committee directed that an inquiry should be made into the matter. Ordinary malt extract, the committee points out, is an evaporated infusion of malt, and consists principally of dextrin and maltose, and possesses certain digestive properties. But it has become customary to make a liquid extract of malt, by a process of less evaporation of the infusion, and adding alcohol to prevent decomposition. These preparations are said to average 7 per cent, and upwards of alcohol. Those who object to alcoholic medicines should have an assurance that their purchase does not contain alcohol, and should not purchase any proprietary preparation from licensed chemists.—British Congregationalist.
