The Lighter Side of Life

Playing for Safety.

Two sailors were arranging the meals for their mates, that some of the politicians want to efface party lines. "Yes?" "Well, I just hope they do. Having your telephone ring every time a neighbor puts in a call is a perfect nuisance."
"Eight pounds of m-a-c-k-i—"
"That's wrong," said Bill, thoughtfully.
So he crossed it out and began again. "Eight pounds of m-a-c-k-i—"
"Ere, mate," he said, "we'll give 'em tapoca."
"Right-o," agreed his friend, amiably.
"Eight pounds of t-a-b—" it didn't look right. So Bill crossed it out and wrote: "Eight pounds of t-a-p-e—"
After looking a moment at the sheet he ran his pencil through it all and snorted:
"They'll have to 'ave rice."
So he ordered:
"Eight pounds of r-i-s-e-i!"

Matthew Modernized.
Southern version: "Sufficient unto the day are the weevils thereof."

Playing It Safe.
A rising young artist was showing a lady through his studio.
"This picture," he said, stopping before one of his early efforts, "is one I painted to keep the wolf from the door."

"Indeed," replied the woman. "Then why don't you hang it on the knob where the wolf can see it?"

Greatest Wedding of War

The picture shows Prince George of Battenberg and his bride, who was Countess Nada Torby, daughter of Grand Duke Michaelovitch, of Russia. Their marriage, which took place in London, was the most brilliant of the war and was witnessed by the King and Queen and others of the royal family.

One Billion Dollar Fund To Aid All War Sufferers

Assemblage Representing the Wealth of Philadelphia Hears Diplomatist Make Plea—Suggest Federal and State Action—Appeals to Higher American Spirit.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 21.—A relief fund of at least one billion dollars, made up, if necessary, with the aid of Federal and State appropriations, was advocated last night by Myron T. Herrick, formerly United States Ambassador to France, as the gift of the United States to the wounded and the suffering of the war involved nations of Europe.
Mr. Herrick spoke by invitation at the residence of E. T. Stotesbury upon the work accomplished by the American ambulance field service in France. His presence was made the occasion of the first showing in Philadelphia of the moving pictures taken by the French government as part of its official archives of what the three hundred young men constituting the corps had actually done in the work of humanity. Mr. Herrick spoke before an audience representing a large part of the wealth of Philadelphia.
"We would have been strictly within our rights as a neutral nation," said Mr. Herrick, "if we had done nothing as many advocated, but since the laws of nations permits us as a neutral nation to perform this service it should, in my opinion, be construed as a duty to perform the service. A failure to do so would be passing by on the other side and we should fail to do our duty as a Christian nation."

To Earn the Love of Europe.
"It is not only the soldiers at the front, fighting and dying for their country on whom the hardships of war must bear with cruel weight. It is a glorious and conspicuous thing to die for one's country; it is more difficult to live for one's country as the women, the old men and even the children of France are doing. There is scarcely a home in France that does not mourn its men swallowed up in the great conflict; not a village without its crippled men to be constant reminders of the human sacrifices of these terrible years; not a person who will not bear through life the unseen scars that grief has marked on mind and heart."

"It is little enough that America can do. We cannot heal the broken hearts nor fill the empty homes. So far as sits in money or supplies and the personal service of our people can soften for the sufferers in Europe the hard conditions under which they now exist, it is our duty to aid to the uttermost extent of our ability.

"There is an impression that to be neutral means that we may profit from the blood and tears of nations in agony and that there is no obligation on us to return to do more than give a little from the surplus, but there is an active neutrality which will cause Europe to think of us when this war is over not as the commercial minded sellers of munitions and supplies alone, but as the large-hearted, free-handed people which have cared for the wounded and dying, clothed and fed the homeless and hungry and nursed the helpless victims of battle. These are the actions which will gain us the love of Europe rather than its contempt for our commercialism.
"The situation can be adequately met only by the systematic organization of all the philanthropic forces of the United States. A strong central authority is needed, such as the government alone can give. I wish that the President had seen fit (and it is not yet too late) to appoint a large number of the leading men of the country as a committee to take charge of the whole undertaking; to co-ordinate all kinds of relief work, receiving the aid of Federal and State governments even to the extent of appropriations.
An Aid to Future Peace.
"Were we to set the mark at a billion dollars, that would be little enough to meet the extraordinary demands of this worst calamity that the world has ever known. It is often said that the United States will have no friends when this war ends, but were we to create this giant charity, to labor in every one of the belligerent countries for the relief of the wounded and destitute, its beneficent work would far overcome all the animosities which now vex us. We should have all these nations as our friends. The performance of our duty as a Christian nation would also be our most effective measure of defence.
This should not be true only measure of defence. Because I have seen great nations rush into battle in a few short days; because I have hidden through blood-stained fields where thousands of dead men lay, with faces upturned to the sky; because I have seen long lines of vehicles dripping blood as they bore the wounded back from the front; because I have seen the awful ruin of war until it numbs the mind and sickens the heart.
"But peace lies in strength, not in weakness. The balance of the world has been upset and civilization is turned back a hundred years. In the midst of a world at war we cannot tell what dangers may threaten us. We do not know that an army and navy of reasonable strength are essential to the continued peace of this great, rich country."

Mr. Herrick reviewed the work of the American Ambulance Hospital in Paris and the American Ambulance. He estimated the ambulance had transported 250,000 wounded men since the war began.
Wise housekeepers say Ingersol Cheese goes farther than ordinary cheese. No waste, all good.
