Those of the men who lived beyond the metropolis were taken to the railway station by a prison official and given tickets to their native places. Those who lived in London were allowed to follow their own choice.

One of the discharged criminals, a man who, though only forty-five, had spent twenty-three years behind prison bars, said he was released four days before his time.

"I'm a' four-monther," he said, "in for felony. By rights I should have come out next Friday, but imagine my surprise when I was informed on Sunday that I could pack up and go this morning. What do I think of it? Well, I'm too old a bird to say, but I think it would have a good effect on what we call the 'juvs'-that is, boys under 21. If they see they are being treated kindly they may run straight. Goodness me, the Scrubs is a playground to what it was twenty years ago. If they had been a bit more lenient with me and the likes of me, I might have gone straight myself."

As he went on talking he became quite pathetic about his past, and even showed traces of tears. He had, he said, 4s. 10d. "gratuity" with his discharge, and he had "to start afresh" on that sum. From Holloway Prison about fifty women were released, and greeted by a large crowd of friends. One elderly female prisoner, who had passed through more than one period of imprisonment, could hardly believe her good fortune, and to signallize it engaged in a dance of abelight before the prison gate and hurled endearments at the police constables.

The longest curtailment of sentence fell to a young country girl, a domestic

New York, Sept. 18.—The market during the morning ruled firm, with trading of a mixed character. ENGLISH AND DISCHARGED.

Englishmen Say That Nationality Pre-Englishmen Say That Nationality Prejudices Them in Captain's Eyes.

St. Catharines, Sept. 17.—The steamer Advance was held up in Welland Canatat Thorold to-day by High Constable Boyle, who compelled Purser MacFarland to return to the city to show cause why four English sailors, discharged without seven days' pay, should not be settled with. The case was heard by Police Magistrate Comfort, and the mentold a story of seven days' wrethedness inflicted upon them by Capt. Doust, who finally discharged them because they were English. When evidence was taken MacFarland settled with the men, paid the costs and the boat proceeded.
