The first of this translation of the majority whose estimation one man is a patent as another; and who hold daim, to an equal share in the General and indefeasible."

The very true, that uneducated men is apacities are frequently to be the holits of observation and remained or unstronger, whose minds are abundantly to the halits of observation and remained or understand the standy of books. But, surely djudgment will, on this account, a man who cannot read a newsporant of nearly all that is going; world at a distance from him, as but a very limited knowledge a taking place in the small comich he is an actual and a living can have no accurate or sufficient what is advanced, either for or upolic measure—who can have no instituting enquiries for himself, in judgment, for himself, on the contention of the free ducation and layed, by means of reading, "from "and who, in the same way, can infimately acquainted with the sort of the decational and listen to all their debates."

If it he said they are but few whom this unlifeation would exclude; and, therefore

If it be said they are but few whom this qualification would exclude; and, therefore their admission cannot be dangerous; we answer—The great object the ducation to be afforded to the people, is to qualify them for the duc appreciation, and the right exercise of the political privilege of freemen; and, be they fow, or be they many, who are unwilling to entitle themselves to these privileges, by their own exertions, when the means of enabling them to do so are provided for them, they cannot justly be deemed worthy of them; nor would it he safe to entrust such men with the exercise of them.

Mr. Loudworrs, we observe, is reported to have said that he thought the proposed Bill a very weeping measure; and that it would have the effect of completely taking the privilege of returning members to Parliamentoutof the hands of those possessed of property, and who have a stake in the country, and giving it to those who had none. This view of the hon, member is, we apprehend, to a certain extent, the correct one. The measure, were it even limited by the educational qualification once proposed, would still be "a very sweeping" one, possibly a very dangerous one, for a time; but, with that qualification it would certainly, we think, be a much wiser and safer measure than it will be without fit.

If the Bill pass with its present latitude of application, not only will it operate in the manner indicated by Mr. Longworth, but it will effectually place "the basement class of our social edifies in a position to over-rule all the others; it will give to those who toll the power to govern those who think; and impart to those who labor with the hands a supremacy over those who labor with the hands a supremacy over those who labor with the hands a supremacy over those who labor with the hands a supremacy over those who labor with the hands a supremacy over those who have all the others, as we are, of mere party interests, and, identifying our own with none but those of the people at large—we heartily rejoice in having it in our power

EXTENSION of the ELECTIVE FRANCHISE BILL.—On Friday evening, (25th, inst.,) in the House of Assembly, this Bill was reported agreed to in Committee, without any amendment; and ordered to be engrossed. So far it has, we are sorry to say, progressed without an educational qualification clause.

We are requested to state that the meeting of the Horticultural Society will certainly take place at the Temperance Hall on Tuesday next at 4 o'clock.

THE BAZAAR AT GEORGETOWN WILL take place on Tuesday the 8th March, instead of Wednesday, as heretofore advertised.

(For Hastard's Gazette.)

Mr. Editoria:—

I saw in your paper of the 10th instant, a copy of Mr. Gladatone's amended Bill, which is to confer apon the Church population of the Colosies, the privilege of meeting in Synod for the settlement of their own Ecclesiasticat affairs. The Bill itself appears to be remarkable for little else than its vagaeness and ambiguity. Still were the church thoroughly free from Tracturian driver, less exclusive in her pretensions, and more anxious for the advancement of Christ's spiritual, kingdoin, than the enforcement of antiquated forms and pompous nellities, little danger might accrue from its passing into a law. Indeed, under such circumstance, ait might conduce to the promotion of a better state of discipline amongst us, and to reader our jubilic services more generally acceptable. But the professed principles of its framer, coupled with the ambiguity to which I have referred, are sufficient to excite suspicion as to the fairness of his intentions, and doubt as te the fitness of the remedy which he provides.

and doubt as to the tiness of the remony which he provides.

That Mr. Gladstone is a man of first-rate ability few will geerion, that he is a rest and busy meddler in Church matters is equally evident—and will it not at once occur to the mind of the reflecting and consistent Churchman, that if any pressing necessity existed for bringing cauch a Bill before Parliament, the Bi shope, as the professed guardians and rulers of the Church were the men to initiate such a measure, and for bringing such a Bill before Parliament, the Bi shops, as the professed gustilans and rulers of the Church, were the men to initiate such a messure, and not a comparatively youthful Layman? Their Lordships have hitberto cautiously and wisely abstained from interfering, (at least so far as publicly known,) and who is he, who has had the temerity to put forth his hand, to steady the ark of God? You will find his name among the supporters of the Maynooth grant, as well as among the opponents of the Ecclesiastical Titles' Bill. You will find him voting for the admission of Jows into Parliament, thus asking in an attempt to unchristianize the legislature. He was the active associate, also, with the Irish brigade, in overthrowing the late conservative and sound Protestant Ministry. As a theological writer, he is is said to be subtle and evasive, and as a Denominationalist, we know that he has, left, the field in which he was curtured, and made his way to a more retrogressive communion, not the Church of Rome, but a sort of half-way house between Can we regard the Joon then which this escader offers to the Church, from which he thought fit to depart, without suspecting his motives, and the object at which he sime? We know not the voice of a stranger, and we must healtain to follow where a stranger leads. After all, what soed is there for this interference? If the privileges of Self-government granted to the colonies be of any value, it must surely include free legislation in matters of conscience. It is idle, therefore, to suppose, that we shall be obstructed in the management of our secular affairs, atili more so, that we should be interfered with apon so sensitive a matter at religion.

It would appear from that sound and independent periodical, "The Church Witness," that all the North American Colonial Bishops are in favour of firet appeal to the views and wishes of the lay members of their respective Discosse.

By an apparently preconcerted movement, several of these Bishops have reconstly arrived in England, t trine of baptismal regeneration will become one test of orthodoxy in the Colonies, as it now is in the English Diocesse of Exeter and Ripon, and little, if any hope will remain to us of effecting those improvements which are generally admitted to be so necessary to the progress of the Church.

An emineus allenes for the most part pervades the diocese with regard to this important messure, and where notice has hitherto been taken of it, it is assumed that all is right, that no feeling of opposition exists towards it; that the bill is harmless, and may prove useful. But it us ent forget, that should it pass the Imperial Legislature, it will influence all the acts and preceedings of Colonial Churchmen, whether they approve the Bill or not.

New Branswick has indeed made a spirited and successful stand against the projected scheme, two parishes only, Carleton and St. Andrew's, giving it their approval, in the foremer place at a meeting of but note're individuals, and at the latter by a neglority of one?? Why should we not at once then follow the excellent example of our sister Colony? Indeed no time is to be lost, and let no infirmity of purpose characterize our proceedings, unless we at once rise to meet the present emergency, our freedom and independence will be wrested from us, and that without a struggle. Our silence will be construed into acquisecence, and though the blame may fall heavily elsewhere, still we shall have to thank our own supine ladifference, that the bill over become the law of the land.

These few observations, may, I hope draw attention to the critical situation in which we are placed, and induce others more completen than myself to come forward, with heart and hand, to free the Church from the tractarian toils which now, unhappily, beset it.

Yours, &c. LIBERTAS.
