FAITHFUL TO THE END.

A recluse of 85 years was found a few days ago dying from cold and starvation in a squalid hovel in the city of Brooklyn. He was found by a good Samaritan who, observing the old man's absence from the streets set out to ascertain the cause and offer assistance if needed. He happened the door of the wretched hovel, saw the old man, apparently dead, stretched on a bed of straw in a corner, but that was all he saw, for almost in the twinkling of an eye a most respectable looking "billy" had leaped from a dark corner and landed him on all fours in the middle of the street. A detachment of police was at once sent to the place, but the guest stood on guard, and it was only by a good deal of strategy that he was captured and secured with the bracelets. The old man was still alive but he died soon after, muttering, "Alone and dying. My only friend Billy." We claim that in this civilized age no man with millions of neighbors around him, or even with one neighbor, should be permitted to perish in this way. The question arises: Are the authorities of Brooklyn guilty of this man's death? Is any man guilty who knew of the straits in which he was placed and had the ability to succor him? Another question arises and that is: What has the future in store for his goathip? When forsaken and forgotten, the old man lay perishing of cold and starvation, the poor dumb animal stood guard over him and would have provided for his necessities, without hope of reward, had it been in his power. Will he perish in the end while men who turn away from the unfortunate and live solely for themselves have eternal life?

One cannot help hoping that the patient ox, the faithful horse and dog, even this poor billy goat who in his poor way stood up in defence of his friend when he was unable to defend himself, and starved and suffered with him, will in the unknown future have their reward. That they will is the belief of many biblical students of nearly every protestant denomination.

ST. JOHN LETTER.

President Jordan of the Leland Stanford University in a recent lecture predicted the downfall of Great Britain during the present century, asserting that its inhabitants were a mere shadow of their forefathers physically and intellectually. History tells what their forefathers were and history will tell what their descendants are of today. It is circumstances that make men. If circumstances permit, Lord Roberts, Kitchener, Buller and White will prove themselves no less capable than were Wellington and the famous generals of his day. If circumstances call for a Lord Nelson a Lord Nelson will appear. We remember when they said in the United States that the days of such men as Washington and General Putnam were past. But when the time was ripe obscure Abraham Lincoln stepped into the shoes of Washington, and Hobson of Santiago fame into those of General Putnam. President Jordan need not worry, when men are wanted they always put in an appearance—even such men as Washington and Wellington.

George Golding of this city is under arrest for criminal assault.

For assaulting and cutting a woman with a razor Frank Nairn and Minnie Burns were sentenced last Tuesday to 12 months in jail.

The Telegraph discloses its pro-Boer sympathies but the public will not soon forget its utterances on Ladysmith day. Pneumonia, often fatal, is very prevalent in the city. The weather since the first of March has been very trying to the old and the infirm.

A. O. Skiney, carpet dealer, had a narrow escape from death or serious injury by the collapse of a scaffold loaded with merchandise in his ware room last Wednesday.

C. J. Thomas Sullivan, a veteran of the Fenian Invasion of 1866 died last Thursday aged 81 years.

There has been a slight weakening in flour since last week and some millers quote a decline of five cents per barrel. Oatmeal and cornmeal are firm and unchanged. Markets are nearly bare of molasses; the few casks of choice P. H. are out of the market; the last sales made were at 15 cents. Butter is scarce and quoted at 18 and 19 cents according to quality. Eggs are firm at 17 cents. Large trays of new crop India and Ceylon teas are arriving; prices are one cent lower than two months ago. Sugars are firm but prices are unchanged. Business is particularly good in New Brunswick and lumbermen are laying in large supplies for steam driving; dull in Nova Scotia because of absence of snow.

Collector W. Cantona J. R. Ruel, died last Thursday night after a brief illness, aged 80 years. He was always deeply interested in educational and Christian work, a gentleman for whom everybody by whom he was known entertained the highest respect. He was deeply interested in the various improvements that have been made in the Fernhill Cemetery during the last five or six years, and was liberal in his contributions in time and money to that end.

The condition of Senator Lewin's health is the occasion of anxiety to his friends. EDWARD EDWARDS.

Brave Sunbury Boy.

All the Canadians in the British fighting ranks in South Africa are not in the Canadian contingents, says the Chatham World. We know of one, at least, in the South African Light Horse, a Cape Colony corps, and there are probably several others. Their names ought to be on the Canadian roll at Cape Town, so that casualties among them might be reported officially to the Canadian government. William Cox, a native of Margerville, Sunbury Co., and brother of Dr. Philip Cox, principal of the Chatham Grammar school, is one of the heroes of the war in South Africa.

Mr. Cox went to England in May last, and proceeded direct to Capetown from there. He visited the Transvaal, went as far north as Bulawayo, and returned to Capetown. Then he got a contract on railway construction at Middleburg in the Transvaal, and was engaged on it when the Boers declared war on Great Britain. As he was a loyal Briton the Boers robbed him and ordered him out. In a letter dated Escourt, Natal Jan. 6, he says:

"I am getting along first rate and would have made some money had not this war driven us all out of the country. My little outfit was commandeered—horses, mules, carts, wheelbarrows and everything in fact. I hold a receipt from the Transvaal government for the things taken, but it is questionable if that will be worth anything after the war is over.

"A number of us who were associated on the Middleberg work came down through Natal around Cape Town after war was started. Six of us joined the South African Light Horse and have been in the field for two months. We were with Methuen's column, near Kimberley, then back to Cape Town and around to Natal. Two squadrons of our lads were badly cut up near Colenso, a few days ago and we are on our way to reinforce them. They lost 45 out of 100. We will probably be in action tomorrow. There is fighting going on now seven miles from here, and the guns can be distinctly heard. I am going with Gen. Sir Chas. Warren to Freetown today, as we are secret. It is the first at Freetown that is now engaged. Our squadron are a fine lot of fellows, mostly Americans. Quite likely some of us will be missing after tomorrow.

"The Dutch have had the best of the racket up till the present, and are holding their own gallantly. They are brave fellows and are fighting for their existence as an independent people. I saw the Canadian contingent and met several of them. I know—Pekins, McFarland, and others. The bugle has sounded and I must go. This may be the last you will hear from me. Remember me to everyone."

The transfer of the South African Light Horse from Middleberg to Natal was not mentioned in the newspaper reports, such transfer being kept secret as possible. After the check at Magersfontein, Methuen in his entrenchments did not need cavalry as badly as Buller did, and this corps was sent to Cape Town by rail, from Cape Town to Durban by Steamer, and from Durban to Buller's camp.

Mr. Cox went through the disastrous battle at Colenso unharmed, and was under the Lord Dundonald in the attempt to get around the right flank of the Boers. According to a press report he distinguished himself at Potgieter's Drift, where the first crossing of the Tugela was effected, by a daring feat. He and six others under the leadership of Lieut Corrie of his squadron, swam across the river after the ponton, or rope ferryboat, that was moored on the other side. They reached it safely though one of them was seized with cramps and had to be assisted heavily on the mooring rope and hauled out into the stream. Then the bullets began to fly around their heads, a party of Boers having galloped down from the hills just too late to catch them in close range. Just then the guiding rope jammed in the pulleys, the river being in flood and the current strong, and the ponton came to a standstill. But the Boer bullets kept flying without a hitch, the marksmen being only 450 yards distant. The men jumped overboard. Fast of them swam ashore and began to pull on the guiding rope, but Cox and others clung to the gunwale, partly exposed to the Boer fire.

Cox then did a particularly plucky action. Seeing all efforts to free the ponton by hauling on the guiding rope proving futile, he deliberately got on deck again, and succeeded in removing and obstruction in the hawser, then dived again amid a hail of bullets, and swimming to the drift lost his aid to pull in.

They got the ponton across without a fatality and everyone of them miraculously escaped without a wound. If Corporal Cox continued to escape Boer bullets he was, no doubt, one of the bold troopers who rode into Ladysmith with the Earl of Dundonald last Wednesday night.—Herald.
