

QUALITY

in the flour means quality in the bread and the pastry you bake. Without quality behind your efforts, no knowledge or skill can bring good results. Better be without the skill than without the quality.

"BEAVER" FLOUR

is the highest development of blended wheats, embracing the rich health-giving properties of Manitoba Spring wheat and the carbohydrates of Ontario Fall wheat, which make delicate, white, light bread and pastry.

Remember, it is for bread and pastry, both. With BEAVER FLOUR in the house, you only need one kind to attain the best results in every form of baking.

BEAVER FLOUR means economy as well as efficiency. Ask your grocer for it to-day.

CHAPTER XIV.
An Arm Chair.

"I don't mind that, but it's Crump I'm afraid of. She dissolves so soon! Falls to pieces, I mean. It's what Pups called 'want of stamina.'"

"You don't want any of that, do you?"

"No, I think not—but I must go. Will you put down some coin?"

"I'll go with you and see what the cost is. That is, if you'll have me, Miss Toney?"

"But the Times!" laughed Toney, "and then I shall run quick, and you can't run because of your foot."

"Suppose Jim gets the dog-cart ready? I was told to order it if I wanted air, but I was too lazy."

"First-rate! I'll go and help him, and before the General could interfere Toney was out of the window."

"The girl will break her neck as sure as fate," he said, and then after some meditation, he added, "I must certainly secure that whistle!"

Much quicker than was usually the case, the dog-cart came round. Toney was driving Jim, and the General, who was at the front door, exclaimed,

"Am I to trust my neck to you, Miss Toney? Would Esperin have had so much courage as to do that?"

"If you are a soldier, of course you will. But don't parley, Bess hates standing still. Jim can go behind I say, General Stone, is Aunt Dove looking out of any window?"

"I hope not!"

"You won't tell of me, will you? I mean, you'll say you liked my driving you. Just ask me formally, don't you?"

"I shall be glad, Miss Toney, if you will drive me to Winchley, and still more delighted if you will bring me back safely."

"You are just the nicest General in the whole Queen's Army. There, tuck the rug in your side and don't think of anything. I'll get you there in no time."

Jim was behaving as a gentleman's servant should. Not a shade of expression passed over his countenance; he merely obeyed, touched his hat repeatedly, and in another moment Bess, guided by those small hands, was dashing along at a first-rate pace. The General was soon reconciled to his situation. He saw at a glance that Toney could drive, and that there was no flaw in her splendid nerve.

"I don't think this exercise is quite included in your time-table, is it, Toney?"

"After Saturday afternoon there is a dash, then—half-holiday. I studied it before coming out. You see, I couldn't stand in a room and do nothing till tea-time."

"Hardly, you seem fond of doing."

"Yes, I am. Work while you have the light! that was Pups' favorite text, and he worked, you bet!"

"Toney, do young ladies use these expressions?"

"I expect not. They just ease in their ideas; but I'm only a Bush girl, I say, General. I can fancy this is our buggy, only I ought to be gnawing a piece of apple. I expect you'd make a face at the mangoes and the guavas."

"Now, Miss Toney, I think I have made up my mind. I think one whistle will be sufficient, and I call it cheap at the price."

"I'll rub it like anything to polish it well. You are a brick; but then suppose it's more than five shillings?"

"We shall soon settle that point, for I see Winchley."

Toney could not resist dashing up the principal street of the small country town with evident pride, and when the party stopped at the "Family Liney Draper" she was soon down, whilst the General followed more slowly.

"Don't you really mind coming? I should like you to see it's all square; I don't think you quite trust me."

"Indeed I do."

When they entered the shop the General seated himself and waited for Toney to act spokeswoman. By this time he was highly interested in the proceedings.

The owner, Mr. Todd, seeing the Aldersheld House dog-cart hurried forward to wait himself upon the young lady.

"Good afternoon," began Toney, holding out her hand to the astonished draper, "I want your help, Mr. Todd. I want the most suitable stuff for covering an arm-chair. It must be very good and durable, because I can't afford to buy any more stuff till I'm earning some money myself."

Mr. Todd bowed low, hid a smile, and hurried away.

"Miss Toney, you needn't explain everything," said the General.

"Why not? It's just the best way to make yourself understood. He would bring us lots of things we didn't want, and you would get awfully impatient. Men always do, even the best of 'em."

Mr. Todd returned with an armful of goods.

"It's rather dark in this room, miss, but these cretonnes are very good and durable. The colour will stand sun, and I'm sure you'll be pleased with them."

"I hope so, but the chief thing is to please Miss Crump."

Mr. Todd knew all about Miss Crump, he having succeeded to her father's business, but he was not prepared to hear that her taste was of much importance in the big house.

"Do you mean Miss Crump up at Lady Dove's, miss, or another lady of that name?"

"You don't think there is another lady of that funny name, do you?" the port-Lady Dove's companion. Do you know her, Mr. Todd?"

"I may say miss, that I knew her when quite a young person."

"Then, perhaps, you know if she would like this soft brown or this dark crimson best?"

"Miss Crump always had quiet tastes, miss, but perhaps the cretonne is for her ladyship?"

"No, it's for Miss Crump's own chair. I have just re-stuffed it, and I can finish it to-night. I think this dark crimson is best; it's more cheerful, and she goes wanting cheering, doesn't she, General Stone?"

"Not when you are with her. Well, is it to be this?"

"I'm sure Miss Crump will be pleased. If you would like to step upstairs, miss, I have a chair of my own covered with this very material. We have a gentleman lodger in the back room—I may say a gentleman Miss Crump would know—the sofa there is covered with the brown stuff, but in the front room—"

"I'll take your word for it, please, Mr. Todd, as I have company with me I want a good many yards to do it well, and to have a piece over for the arms 'ket dirty. How much is it a yard. I want six yards."

"It's three shillings a yard, miss, and really cheap for the quality."

Toney took a pencil and began to make a slow calculation, then she lifted her head and looked rather blank at the General.

"It makes eighteen shillings, General. It's three shillings more than I have, besides the whistle-money."

"So do," said the General, smiling. "Put it up, Mr. Todd, between us I think we can pay you."

Mr. Todd was smiling, thinking that the gentleman was very funny, and that the young lady was still more odd, when she dived into a purse and brought out her ten shilling-piece and put it down before Mr. Todd with great ceremony.

"You must have two whistles, General," she whispered.

"Yes," he said, "two whistles would make us more than square; but I think I shall prefer only one whistle and the three shillings will be discount."

"Are you sure, miss, that you won't go upstairs to see the chair before deciding? Our lodger, Mr. Faber—"

"Mr. Faber, a missionary?" exclaimed Toney.

"Well, miss, it's the same, but he's returned invalided. A returned empty he calls himself, though as for that—"

"Please give me the parcel, Mr. Todd," said Toney. "Bess—that's the horse, you know—can't bear shopping."

The General put down his share of the transaction, and the two left the shop.

Toney seized the reins and dashed off in great style, but once out of the town she and Bess became quieter.

"I'm awfully obliged to you, General Stone; I am indeed."

"Pray, don't mention it."

"But I must. Lots of Generals—though I don't know many—wouldn't have just obliged a neighbour as you have done. I didn't say much just now, because I was all 'upside down."

"Were you? What about?"

"Didn't you hear? Why, Mr. Todd said that Mr. Faber was lodging with him! Suppose you had been waiting for years for your 'gin'—"

"Gin? Do you allude to spirituous liquor?"

"Oh, no! Gin is a bushman's wife, you know. But suppose you had, you would feel excited if you heard that she was come back."

"Possibly, but I doubt it."

"You have a cold heart!" said Toney, laughing again. "You are just like 'Converted Jane'."

"Converted Jane!"

"Yes, she was my best hen, but she had no heart, no affections. Her husband 'Plumes' was just the contrary. The General again hid his smile.

"But, Miss Toney, this gentleman may have brought back two or three 'gins'."

"Oh, no!—but, well, I didn't ask how stupid of me! Promise solemnly, General, that you won't hint to Crump that Mr. Faber is here. She might die of it."

General Stone had not the least intention of getting into such a confidential conversation with Miss Crump as this implied, so he readily promised.

NORWEGIANS ARRESTED.—Two Norwegian seamen, who were belonging to the ill-fated Thattalig, created a disturbance on Water Street yesterday afternoon. They were arrested by Constables Furlong and Humber.

$50 FOR RELIEF FUND.—At the monthly meeting of the Star of the Sea Society last evening the amount of fifty dollars ($50.00) was voted towards the Marine Relief Fund. At various other institutions collections are being taken up.

GUESTS AT BALSAM PLACE.—Rev. C. Jeffrey, Pouch Cove; John Baitland, Toronto; Capt. G. Burrell, London; G. Kingscot, London, H. J. Crowe, Botwood; Rev. S. A. Darison, King's Cove; J. Baxter, City; A. J. Moulton, Halifax.

BOYFIRES BLAZED.—Last night St. John's night—three bon fires blazed on the South Side Hill with one on Gibbett Hill and one below the Signal Station. In old times the whole harbor was lit up with the rays of such burning on the heights but at present the people do not take much interest in such displays.

FLUSHING DRAINS.—Yesterday afternoon the Council had a number of men with lengths of hose out in the west end flushing the drains. In view of the spread of scarlet fever and other diseases this was badly needed. If the gradings and gullies were sprinkled with disinfectant it would be a good idea.

BAD FISHERY.—People in from that section within the past couple of days say that the Cape St. Mary's fishery, if matters continue as at present, will be a bad failure. Matthew Murphy's boat, of Argentea, is high liner to date with about 100 qtls. ashore, and boats from Fox Harbor and Placentia haul for only from 20 to 30 qtls. This is away behind last year's record.

The Tale of Perfect Time in a Watch

From Mainspring to Hairspring, between them lies the secret.

The Mainspring is the power which it transmits to the active parts of the watch. The Hairspring has the control and regulates the motion. The fitting is most delicate; imagine a 100th part of a hair. (Impossible to do!) It is so fine that it is enough to interfere in its performance, so wonderful in its adjustment. The friction from accumulating dirt, lack of oil, etc., destroy these perfect fittings. Do not let your watch run to ruin from neglect. Remember our business is the care of watches, and our opinion costs nothing.

Atlanta Convict Cooked to Death

Atlanta, June 19.—In his attempt to escape, hindered by double shingles, John Wallace, a convict, served a term at the city stockade, was sentenced to death in a sewer. Wallace was working with the road gang when he approached a man hole. Seeing an opportunity to get away from his fate, he waited until the guard's back was turned and then dropped in the hole, and in a minute was out sight in his windings. Ten minutes after he entered and while the guards were standing over all manholes was lying, gun in hand, for him to attempt to get out. 10,000 gallons of boiling water were let loose in a raging torrent by the factory of Fulton Bag & Cotton.

Hoping to rescue the convict, Gun Menders, from whom he made his escape, volunteered to enter the sewer, but the superintendent of the work told him that it was useless and refused to allow the sacrifice. The convict was only a short distance in the sewer when the flood of boiling water struck him, and it is believed by the officers that he was literally cooked to death.

Will Make Hair Grow

Every up-to-date woman should have radiant hair.

There are thousands of women who have harsh, faded, characterless hair, who do not try to improve it.

In England and Paris women take pride in having beautiful hair. Every Canadian woman can have lustrous and luxuriant hair by using SALVIA the Great American Sage Hair Tonic. McMurdo & Co. sell a large bottle for 50 cents, and guarantees it to banish Dandruff, stop falling hair, and tighten scalp in ten days, or money back.

Workers Should Remember

(1) That whiskey possesses no nutritive value whatever, and therefore can afford no strength.

(2) That all alcoholic drinks, on account of the alcohol—poison—they contain, may exert a brief temporary feeling of warmth and excitability, but they soon induce sleepiness and lower the body temperature.

(3) That alcoholic drinks on account of the same poison, weakens muscular power, steadiness of the hands, and the whole mental and physical working ability—make one slow and inattentive, and diminish the power of self-preservation.

(4) That the regular use of alcohol increases the liability to all kinds of diseases, and prolongs recovery.

(5) That the habitual use of alcohol particularly favors liability to consumption.

(6) That the regular use of alcoholic drinks causes an early loss of working ability.

(7) That "Blue Monday" is almost without exception to be attributed to (Sunday) indulgence in alcoholic drinks.

(8) That nearly half of the accidents occurring in working hours are caused by the use of alcohol.

(9) That the regular use of alcohol draws from the workman's pocket a large amount of money that is wasted, which would much better be spent for food and clothing and other useful things.

(10) That regular use of alcohol greatly endangers health and prosperity.—Everybody's Monthly.

Billiousness is Bad Enough
