"FORCETFULNESS."

A Sublime Attribute on God's Part Which All Should Imitate.

Their Sins and Their Iniquities Will I

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 5 .- Dr. Talmage's sermon this morning taught that the art of forgetting is worth culcivating, and that there is the highest possible ex-ample for its exercise. His text was Heb. viii., 12: "Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more."

will I remember no more."

The national flower of the Egyptians is The national flower of the Egyptians is the heliotrope, of the Assyrians is the water lily, of the Hindoos is the marigold, of the Chinese is the chrysanthemum. We have no national flower, but there is hardly any flower more suggestive to many of us than the "forget-me-not." We all like to be remembered, and one of our misfortunes is that there are so many things we cannot remember. Mnemonics, or the art of assisting memory, is an important art. It was first suggested by Simonides, of Cos, 500 years before Christ. Persons who had but little power to recall events, or put facts or names or dates in proper processions have, through this art, had their memory reinforced to an almost incredible extent. A coord memory is an invaluable possession.

through this art, had their memory reinforced to an almost incredible extent. A good memory is an invaluable possession. By all means, cultivate it.

But right along with this sort of recollection, which I cannot too highly eulogize, is one quite as important, and yet I never heard it applauded. I mean the art of forgetting. There is a splendid faculty in that direction that we all need to cultivate. We might, through that process, be ten times happier and more useful than we now are. We have been told that forgetfulness is a weakness, and ought to be avoided by all possible means. So far from a weakness, my text ascribes it to to be avoided by all possible means. So far from a weakness, my text ascribes it to God. It is the very top of Omnipotence that God is able to obliterate a part of His own memory. If we repent of sin and rightly seek the divine forgiveness, the record of the misbehavior is not only crossed off the books, but God actually lets it possible. crossed off the books, but God actually lets it pass out of memory. "Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more." To remember no more is to forget, and you cannot make anything more out of it. God's power of forgetting is so great that if two men appeal to him, and the one man, after a life all right, gets the sins of his heart pardoned, and the other man, after a life of abomination, gets pardoned, God remembers no more against one than against the other. The entire past of both the moralist, with his imperfections, and the profligate, with his debaucheries, is as much obliterated in the one case as in the other. Forgotten, forever and forever. "Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more."

ember no more."

This sublime attribute of forgetfulness on the part of God you and I need, in our finite way, to imitate. You will do well to cast out of your recollection all wrongs done you. During the course of one's life he is sure to be misrepresented, to be lied about, to be injured. There are those who keen these things trash by translate to about, to be injured. There are those who keep these things fresh by frequent re-bearsal. If things have appeared in print, they keep them in their scrap-book, for they cut these precious paragraphs out of the newspapers or books and at leisure times look them over, or they have them tied up in a bundle, or thrust in pigeon holes, and they frequently regale themselves and their friends by an inspection of these flings, these sarcasms, these falseholes, and they frequently regale themselves and their friends by an inspection of these flings, these sarcasms, these false-hoods, these cruelties. I have known gentlemen who carried them in their pocket-books, so that they could easily get at these irritations, and they put their right hand in the inside of the coat pocket over their heart, and say: "Look here! Let me show you something." Keep nothing in your possession that is disagreeable. Tear up the falsehoods and the slanders and the hypercriticisms. Imitate the Lord in my text and forget, actually forget, sublimely forget. There is no happiness for you in any other plan or procedure. No one can be happy if he carries perpetually in mind the mean things that have been done him. You can find here and there a man or woman (for there are not many of them) whose disposition is genial and summery. Why? have they always been treated well? Oh, no, hard things have been said against them. They have been charged with officiousne and their generosities have been set dow be a desire for display, and they have no a time been the subject for tittle-tattly and they have had enough small assault; like ones show them; but if you have soars got in ignoble warfare, do not display them. I know you will quote the Bible reference to the horrible pit from which you were digged. Yes, be thankful for the rescue, but do not make displays of the mud of that horrible pit, or splash it over other people. If your sins have been forgiven and your life purified, forget the way-wardness of the past, and allow others to forget it.

people. If your sins have been forgiven and your life purified, forget the way-wardness of the past, and allow others to forget it.

But, what I most want in the light of this text is to impress upon my hearers and readers is that we have a sin-forgetting God. Suppose that on the last day—called the last day because the sun will never again rise upon our earth, the earth itself being flung into fiery demolition—supposing that on that last day a group of infernal spirits should somehow get near enough the gate of heaven and challenge our entrance, and say: "How canst thou, the just Lord, let those souls into the realm of supernal gladness? Why, they said a great many things they never ought to have said, and they did a great many things they ought never to have done. Sinners are they; sinners all." And suppose God should deign to answer, he might say: "Yes, but did not my only Son die for their ranson? Did he not pay the price? Not one drop of blood was retained in his arteries; not one nerve of his that was not wrung in the torture. He took in his own body and soul all the suffering that those sinners deserve. They pleaded that sacrifice. They took the full pardon that I promised to all who, through my Son, carnestly applied for it, and it passed out of my mind that they were oftenders. I forget all about it. Yes, I forget all about it. Their sins and their iniquities do I remember no more." A sin-forgetting God! That is clear beyond, and far above a sin-pardoning God. How often we hear it said: "I can forgive, but I cannot forget." That is equal to saying: "I verbally admit it is all right, but I will keep the old grudge good," Human forgiveness is often a flimsy affair. It does not go deep down. It does not reach far up. It does not f —It is simply an aggravated case of base ingratitude on the part of the fruitgrower if he finds fault with his beekeping neighbor on account of the injury done to fruit by bees. The fruitgrower, in fact, has no warmer friend, no more useful agent, than the pollen-cartying, honey-seeking little insect. The interests of the fruitgrower and beekeeper, far from being antagonistic, lie indeed nearly in the same direction.

—In his annual report of the Colorado experiment station, Prof. C. Max Bross writes as follows: "The successful wintering of bees is of the greatest importance to the beekeeper. On it depends his success or failure for the following summert and in order that every colony may be strong in the spring, eager to start the summer campaign of gathering stores for themselves and their owner, the following points are of greatest importance to the apiarist: The colonies should go into winter quarters with plenty of young bees—at least four frames should be covered with them—and 35 pounds of sealed honey. They should be kept at an even temperature—45 to 50°—and never be unnecessarily disturbed. The hive should be in such a condition as to absorb all the moisture generated by the bees during the wints."
