DAN WENT TO CHURCH.

for Diaz and the republic.

Story of How Daniel the Dog Inter rupted the Minister's Sermon and Willie Came to His Rescue.

[Our Little Ones.] Willie was asleep and Dan was lonely. Willie is the minister's son, Dan is his dog. It was Sunday morning, and everyone was at church but these two friends. It was warm and sunny, and they could hear the good preaching, for their house was next loor to the church. In some way while Willie was listening he fell asleep. Dan kissed him on the nose, but when Willie went to sleep he went to sleep to stay, and did not mind trifles. So Dan sat down with the funniest look of care on his Rye flour—Firm.

A report was received of a meeting of Thursday night, with Mr. McCrae, chairman, and H. K. Fairbairn, secretary. They want better accommodation and are willing to pay for it. The re-port suggested that prizes for fat cattle be the same as other classes; that there be a box-stall provided for calving cows; and that a herd prize be given for grades. It was stated that some of the pig pens were so small that pigs could not turn around in them. It was also suggested that there should be sections for 3-year-old cows and 2-yearold heifers, and a longer list of prizes for calves and younger animals; also that two classes be provided of calves in the dairy breeds.

A Mix-Up on a London Omnibus in the Matter of Making Change Which Was Precipitated by a Meddlesome Florid Gentleman.

It is not alone on London trolley cars that conductors have their troubles. Here is an exquisite bit of a sketch going the rounds from Jerome K. Jerome, on "The Man Who Always Interferes," that conductors all over the earth will sympathize with: It was upon an omnibus that my own personal acquaintance with him began. I was sitting beside two lalies when the conductor came collect fares. One of them handed him sixpence, telling him to take her to Piccadilly Circus, which was two-

"No," said the other lady to her friend, handing the man a shilling, "I pence and I'll pay for the two. The conductor took the shilling punched two twopenny tickets, and then stood trying to think it out. "That's right," said the lady who had spoken last; "give my friend four-pence." The conductor did so. "Now you give that fourpence to me." The friend handed it to her; "and you," sh concluded to the conductor, "give m eightpence, the sixpence he had take The conductor doled out to her th eightpence, the sixpence he had take from the first lady, with a penny and two halfpennies out of his own bag distrustfully, and retired, muttering something about his duties not including those of a lightning calculation "Now," said the elder lady to the younger, "I owe you a shilling. deemed the incident closed, when suddenly a florid gentleman on the opposite seat called out in stentorian

By this time everybody had forgotter what they had done, and contradicted themselves and one another. The florid man took it upon himself to put every-body right, with the result that before The little ones arrived early, and called a policeman for the fourpence (which they wanted to pay, but which the florid man would not allow them to do); the younger lady had become convinced that the Annoyance. In the September Ladies' Home Journal Edward W. Bok notes the abuse of the pretty custom of casting a small parcel of rice or a dainty slipper after a departing bride and groom-an unspoken Godspeed. "The dainty slipper," he also says, "has been transformed into the old shoe of doubtful been vulgarized, and, therefore, the sooner they pass into disuse the better. The sentiment of the customs has been lost. Rice and shoes are no longer omens of good luck. The modern thrower of them has transformed them into missiles with which to annoy and mortify the bride and groom. The better class of people have already begun to substitute a shower of rose petals, and this new and far more beautiful idea is rapidly being fol-lowed. We might have preserved the old customs, but we have not. Henceforth, promiscuous rice-throwing and will be left to the boors of our modern society, into whose hands these acts have fallen, and who seem happiest when they can convert the graceful customs of olden times into practical jokes.'
