

At the Movies Last Night

"Sixty Cents An Hour."

Two feature pictures are offered at the Allen Theatre for the amusement of its patrons the last half of the week.

"Sixty Cents An Hour," starring Walter Hiers, the newest "big" comedian, is replete with humor of the most entertaining kind, and is free from slapstick comedy, making it an agreeable change from the majority of comedies. Walter Hiers takes the part of a soda clerk earning $8 a week, which is cut to $6. He is in love with the daughter of a bank president, but does not seem to make any headway towards getting rich. He loses his job and is appointed watchman of the bank, earning enough out to make a splurge once a week by renting a car. The bank is robbed and the fun begins. The ending is good, and the whole picture is one that will cause dull care away from the most confirmed pessimist.

Mary Miles Minter in "Drums of Fate" is the other offering. The story deals with a plot to overthrow the two most respected men in a small town until two years after they had fallen in love with each other's photographs. How they manage to get together, to be separated again the morning after the marriage and not reunited for several months, is a story that is interesting and in the lead of the picture. The picture is a good picture and seems to be the ruling of the Allen of late and long may it continue.

"Second Fiddle."

Another real good offering, both of vaudeville and pictures, has been secured by Manager Jackson at the Allen Theatre for the last three days of the week.

Of the three turns offered it is hard to pick the real headline, but each one is outstanding for some one feature. Lucy Gillet and Company offer a novel juggling and balancing act that is in a class by itself. Their act is Dutch in theme, and the setting is also. A dance in the wooden "sabots" is cleverly performed. Mack and Sallie furnish the real surprise of the evening. Gorgeous costumes are worn by one of the pair and the act embraces songs and dances. Mack is a former London vaudeville star, and he and Sallie, a female impersonator, and one of the best ever seen here. The last offering, Stuts and Brighams, furnish the comedy of the evening. Laughs galore greet their chatter and antics and three encores were answered by them before the audience was satisfied.

"Second Fiddle," starring Glenn Hunter, is the feature picture, and is a gripping and entertaining drama. The eternal triangle, two boys and a girl, is the theme of the play, but the manner in which this question is treated is unusual. Several spots in the picture are quite spooky, and the audience is kept on the edge of their seats until the final climax. The ending also is new, as the happy couple do not fade away in the distance locked in a fond embrace. A real rain and electric storm is also introduced, the photoplay in these scenes being excellent.

In addition to an interesting Pathe pictorial, there is a really funny comedy, entitled "Hello Partners."

"Stepping Fast," Tom Mix, the famous star of William Fox pictures, is continually adding a new role in each of his pictures. In "Stepping Fast," now being shown at the Patricia Theatre, Mix succeeds in being shanghaied on a boat sailing to China and is forced to act as a stoker. It all started over Tim being informed as to the whereabouts of a gold mine, and the adventures which he has to go through are many. Shanghaied, mixed up with a band of international criminals, hand-to-hand fighting, a racing motor, and last, but not least, Mix's famous horse, all furnish action, which might also be another name for the picture. Mix is supported by Claire Adams, and the film is one of the best which this actor has yet been seen in.

HOLD SHOWER IN HONOR OF MISS MABEL ZAVITZ

Special to The Advertiser.

Wallaceburg, Aug. 23.—A very jolly shower was held at the home of Mrs. H. A. Stonehouse, St. James street, in honor of a bride-to-be, Miss Mabel Zavitz. About forty-five girl friends of the guest of honor assembled in costumes representing many of the most noted men and women of past and present periods. The colored butler (Mrs. Mac McDougall), admitted the guests, and announced their arrival to the hostess and the guest of honor. Among the various groups were noticed: "King George" and the "Prince of Wales" chatting in a very friendly manner with "Maggie" and "Jiggs," much to Maggie's delight. Two ladies of the early 40's looked on with dismay at the loving glances that "Mackenzie King" was dividing between the "Queen of Hearts" and a sweet little "School Girl." "Eloyd Pleasant" and "Kaiser Bill" spent a gleaming hour talking over old times. "The Gipsy Girl" was kept busy telling the fortunes of "Minnie He Ha" and a "Country Cousin."

Many guests came from "The Houseboat on the Stix," and it was remarked how friendly "Sir John A. Macdonald" and "Sir Wilfrid Laurier" were as they talked together. "Martha Washington," "Abraham Lincoln" and "Teddy Roosevelt" were simply delighted at meeting so many old friends. "Murt," a groom-to-be, arrived looking very happy and showed her bride with confetti. Shortly after this a balloon was seen to float softly across the room and stop directly over the bride-to-be, showing her with all kinds of beautiful things. Following this a very dainty lunch was served by the hostess, who was assisted by Mrs. Fred Harrison, Mrs. (Capt.) C. Stonehouse and Miss Stella Forsyth.

CommonSenselsSafetyFirst

A Little Goes a Long Way

More Die From Overeating Than From Undernourishment, Say Experts.

After consulting some half dozen dietitians and food experts and pharmacological chemists in London, The Advertiser discovered that the ordinary common or house sense is the chief safeguard which stands sentry over the gate of all human ills that have their origin in the consumption of foods.

Men of science with a long row of degree letters after their names, or after one of those all-night "knew very little about it all," and that if people would only "use discretion" as Jeff would say, they would have more people die every year from overeating than from undernourishment.

"It's this way," one of them declared, "The grownups ought to know better by experience what they can eat with impunity. If after 40 or 50 years they don't know, then they are not giving themselves a chance to feel well and stay young. As for the young people, who ever heard of them having any digestive trouble, unless it was after the night before, or after having eaten a whole lot of ice cream and lemonade, and then they deserve to feel a little off color in the morning."

Another expert in the art of assimilation thought that staying young was simply a question of what one eats. "I'm not a faddist particularly," he said, "and I'm not a vegetarian but I think a good deal too much meat is eaten, and for that matter there is too much eating of pretty nearly everything on the list. I know that from personal experience. It's just hogwash, even if I do say it, who shouldn't. People go out into the hills and the bush and paddle a great big canoe all over half the American continent for six weeks, eating five or six meals a day, and then when they first get back from their annual holiday, his answer courteous, was something like this:

"Oh, you mean that overdone kind of feeling that is part of the average holiday? Yes, now you've got hold of something I know all about from personal experience. It's just hogwash, even if I do say it, who shouldn't.
