

DR. BRUCE TAYLOR, D.D., TELLS OF REAL SUCCESS

Refers To Men Who Did Things That Benefited Humanity.

"What constitutes success?" was the subject of a sermon by Rev. J. Bruce Taylor, D.D., principal of Queen's University, who spoke before the congregation of New St. James' Presbyterian Church last evening.

Mr. Taylor refuted the orthodox notion of success and substituted belief in the attainment of material rewards. He stated the accomplishments of Schubert, Sir James Dewar, Faraday and W. Saunders of Ottawa as instances of real success, of ambition realized and life enjoyed.

The rise to fortune of typical captains of industry, the speaker declared, was not the attainment of an ideal. He pointed to numerous rich men, and compared their attitude toward life with that of persons who devoted worldly goods, have yet achieved the goal to which they strive.

"If your quest is for wealth of a material sort you will inevitably suffer a meanness of soul," Mr. Taylor said. "The common definition of success is unfortunate, because it is wrong. Let me tell you of what I mean by success, and what the average individual means. A certain young man in England started to work in a large industry as office boy, and by initiative and determination secured control of the business, married his employer's daughter and died worth three millions of dollars. I am not deprecating such men as these because they comprise the element of which benevolent citizens are composed. They have very necessary, but many of them are not successful."

"On the other hand, a man named Saunders, of Ottawa, a man whom few persons have ever heard of, experimented in the crossing of wheat all his life, and is responsible for the prosperity of this country by his accomplishment in developing a superior variety of grain. Yet he reaped no great reward. His only payment was realization that he had done something for the good of humanity, something no one had ever done before. Sir James Dewar is another example of this kind of success. He is the man who liquefied oxygen and air. In order to retain this liquefaction he invented the thermos bottle, but did not make a fortune, because he was too busy to be looking after material rewards. The Germans got hold of the invention and reaped the financial benefit. Sir James was not in the least worried. His success has been greater than any that can accrue to those who selfishly invent and make commercial profit out of it."

Mr. Taylor then told the story of Ralph Stock, a wounded soldier, whose ambition was to see the South Seas after the war. Now Stock, gratified that desire in the face of hopeless impediments, has written a book, which the speaker advised all to read.

Riches, Mr. Taylor declared, invariably bring worry, dissatisfaction and unhappiness unless they are accompanied by a hobby which is advantageous to his fellow-men. It is the mental influence that counts, for every man is happy in the proportion to which he has attained his ideal. The great musicians and literary celebrities have not infrequently composed their works in seclusion and poverty. Their work was their joy, and no commercial compensation could have paralleled the thrill of their creation.

The duty of the liver is to prepare and secrete bile and serve as a filter to the blood, cleansing it of all impurities and poisons.

Therefore, when the liver is inactive and failing to secrete bile in sufficient quantity constipation and other liver troubles soon follow.

Mrs. H. D. Hutchinson, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I have been using your Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and they have done me a lot of good."

My liver bothered me a great deal. I was drowsy and tired all the time and didn't feel like doing anything. I let alone my housework. I tried everything, but your Pills seemed to do the work far better than anything I had ever taken."

Restroom In City Market Is Urged For Farm Women

Agricultural Section of Chamber of Commerce Suggests More Comfort on Market Square—W. H. Porter Again President.

At the annual meeting of the agricultural section of the London Chamber of Commerce, held on Saturday in the Tecumseh House, when various members of the section had been asked to give their views on the relationship of the city and country, both from a business and a social point of view, the state of the local market square was the subject of a heavy bombardment.

A resolution was passed at the close of the meeting, naming the officers and executive of the section as a committee to interview the city and county councils, with a view to obtaining closer co-operation in regard to this question of the market square, and also with a view to increasing the facilities for comfort on the square, and to include the erection of a suitable restroom for the farmers' wives.

Planning Exhibition.
A second resolution was passed, asking the Executive to confer with F. G. Gammage, secretary of the London Gardeners' and Florists' Club to arrange for representation of the section at the fall show which the club is preparing for this year.

The election of officers for 1923 resulted as follows: Chairman, W. H. Porter; first vice-chairman, James H. Wheaton, Thorncliffe; second vice-chairman, John H. Laughton, London; secretary, George Bogue, Byron; executive, W. D. Ellis, Charles MacPhee, Appin; Mrs. W. C. Smith, Crumlin; Mrs. A. T. Edwards, Col. W. J. Brown, Allan Morrison, N. J. Sanderson, Mrs. Edwards, Komokay, A. K. Saddle, J. Laidlaw, Lambeth; Mrs. George Rose and J. H. Taylor.

Mrs. W. C. Smith of Crumlin, one of the most enthusiastic workers and speakers in the U. F. W. O. movement in this part of the country, had a number of questions to ask the members of the section, although she was willing to admit that nine-tenths of the lack of harmony between city and country was due to misunderstanding.

"Why," she asked, "when butter advanced to 57 cents a pound, did we get a cut on milk?"

"Why should we pay 7 cents a kilowatt hour for hydro in the country, when city people pay only 8 cents?"

Referring to the rural telephone system, she said it cost her 35 cents every time she wished to telephone to her neighbor whose farm bordered on hers, yet she could speak to London for 5 cents.

Flays Rural Telephone Rates.
She explained that in Dorchester there were two ministers, who, if they wanted to speak to their parishioners in the northern part of the parish, had to spend the same amount, namely 35 cents.

There was some discussion on this question of telephone charges, and a member from the same district thought that the farmers could easily erect their own telephone system for the price of three years' service under the present system. He suggested that the high price of telephone service was one of the obstacles in the way of lower rates.

What was most needed, he said, was that the two lines serving Dorchester, the East Middlesex Telephone Company and the Harrietteville Telephone Company, should be united by a trunk line.

Mrs. Smith voiced the great need of the farmers' wives for a restroom on the market. It would be, she stated, not only a social place, but a great help in bringing the city and country folk into closer fellowship and understanding.

Mutual respect and sympathy were needed to get rid of the old prejudices that had for so long separated the two classes, and this little room, when it came into being, would contain in itself the germs of a better and more friendly feeling.

N. Sanderson, representing the London Vegetable Growers' Association, spoke briefly on the obstacles that stood in the way of the grower.

He entered his eloquent plea for the man who produced vegetables under glass, and explained that high overhead charges contributed to the exorbitantly high prices that were asked for lettuce and the green stuffs at this time of the year.

Defer Canning Too Long.
Another thing he pointed out, the housewives in London often miss the very best fruit for canning, because they wait too long. For instance, he said, they often put off canning tomatoes until after fair week, which may be all right as far as the fair is concerned, but which results in the tomato being used when it has lost its best keeping qualities and somewhat in flavor.

W. Bogue, president of the London Milk Producers' Association, though remarking that his subject was perhaps a little out of place in this meeting, urged co-operative production and marketing as the only sure remedy for the low price that milk producers were getting. Two years ago, he said, we were getting 23.50 for 100 pounds of milk. Then it came down to 22.40, and then very shortly after that to 22.20.

Considering the high food value of milk it was not long before London was in the happy position of having a milk supply second to none. He registered a strong objection to

FIRE CAUSES DAMAGE OF $7,000 AT GARAGE

Explosion of Oil Burner Starts Blaze in York Street Building.

Damage estimated at about $7,000, including the partial destruction of 15 autos, was done by fire when an oil burner in the basement of the garage of Tennant & Williamson, 68 York street, exploded at 10:40 o'clock Sunday morning. The damage to the building is estimated at $5,000. Accurate figures on the damage to the cars have not been determined yet.

When the firemen arrived the east passageway leading from the storage room to the main entrance was filled with black smoke, and the tops of several cars had been burned. Within a half hour the department had the blaze under control and within an hour had it extinguished.

Although three cars at the rear of the first floor were almost a total loss, two new autos in the front part of the second floor were not even scorched.

The cars in the showrooms were removed before much damage was done to them.

The oil burner from which the fire originated was directly under the boiler.

Five streams of hose, laid in record time, were directed on the building and contents, two on each side and one on top.

Fireman George Smithson was overcome by smoke, but recovered in a few minutes after being taken out into the open.

This is the third fire at the garage within the past month.

Quite a number of the cars which were burned were stored at the garage and not owned by the proprietors.

As the cars are owned by several parties, it is not known what portion of the total loss is covered by insurance.

HAMILTON CAP FIRM SUFFERS FIRE LOSS

Damage to Building and Contents Estimated at $125,000.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Hamilton, March 25.—Following a terrific explosion at the Hamilton Uniform Cap Company, fire occurred early yesterday morning, which completely destroyed contents and building at a loss estimated by the owners at $125,000.

Scattered about the street some distance away were several rolls of cloth. It was impossible for these to be blown from the building, as the explosion occurred in the basement. In the opinion of the fire department, the cause of the blaze, he claims that after burglarizing the place and removing all the valuable material they escaped, but left a bomb to wreck the building. Further investigation is being made.

When the explosion occurred, residents of the district rushed to their windows and saw a section of the company's buildings raised and the interior in flames.

Mr. Uger stated that his stock was worth $100,000 and insured for $60,000, and that the building was valued at $25,000 and covered by $10,000 insurance.

He said that the only combustible material used in the factory was gasoline, and this was stored only in small quantities, carefully protected in bottles.

In addition to Mr. Uger, Mr. Lager and Ed McGinn are financially interested in the company, which has carried on business here for ten years.

A fire occurred at 8 o'clock yesterday in the plant of the Fearman Company, Limited, pork packers, where a blaze had broken out in the smoking room. Fires used to smoke hams overheated the room and $4,000 damage was done to the building and its contents.

Claims Some Protestants Afraid To Defend Beliefs

Rev. Capt. W. C. Riddiford Makes Stirring Appeal To District Orangemen At Sunday Meeting in Masonic Temple.

To all Protestantism went a stirring call for unity yesterday, when Orangemen of the district, several hundred strong, assembled in the Masonic Hall, were addressed by Rev. Capt. W. C. Riddiford, grand organizer G. L. O. B. A., on "Patriotism and Protestantism."

The meeting was more than just a Sunday afternoon mass meeting; it was the opening shot in an intensive campaign for membership to be conducted throughout the week by the Loyal Orange, Lodges of the city.

"We want to go after every Protestant in the city and initiate him into the ranks of the Orange order," declared Capt. Riddiford, urging his hearers to greater activity. "Protestantism must grow. Protestantism must unite. Protestantism must be united."

"Never before in Canada has there been so great a need for the rathering together of Protestants, for throughout the country great opposing forces are working to tear down the existing order of things," he continued.

He referred to an article which he claimed was a report on a speech delivered by Bishop Fallon of this city at a meeting in Boston, to the effect that "America must be converted to the Roman Catholic Church."

"As far as I am personally concerned," continued Capt. Riddiford, "I am not here to fight the Roman Catholic Church as a religion. I do say, however, that I do not believe in the doctrines of Roman Catholicism. I fail to find many tenets of their faith in the Bible, but that does not necessarily mean that I should be unwilling to grant them a right to worship in the way they have chosen."

"But the trouble with many Protestants is they have wishbones where their backbones should be. They are afraid to come out boldly for what they believe. In that respect they differ with our friends the Roman Catholics, for in the words of Bishop Fallon is a challenge to all Protestantism."

"We Orangemen have a principle to live for, and if necessary we are willing to die for it. We stand for the very principles which form the backbone of the British Empire. Without these principles the empire would sink into oblivion."

"I thank God that in the British Empire everyone has a right to worship as he believes. Religious liberty is the first great principle. We all do not think alike. Variety is a law of nature. It is man's mind that counts. As a man thinks within his heart so be he."

Capt. Riddiford here made a strong appeal for a creative constructive co-operative Protestantism. "Every Protestant church in the country must be marshaled and revived so that the spirit of the reformation will live forever," he said.

Right to Interpret Bible.
Then there is the great principle of private judgment. Our friends of the Catholic Church are taught that the priest only has the right to interpret the Bible. To them personally it is a closed book. We, on the other hand, believe in the 'open Bible.'"

"What a blessing it is that when the sun sinks into the west we have the right to open the Book and read. 'The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want.'"

"I say we must fight always for the 'open Bible.' You may say, 'But why worry about it in Canada. Mexico or some other country might need to worry, but surely the Book cannot be closed in this country. Listen to this.'"

Capt. Riddiford then read an extract which he claimed was a clipping from a Canadian paper relating the experiences of an agent for the British and Foreign Bible Society while attempting to sell books in the city of Hull.

In that city, across the river from the seat of government, the agent was arrested by the chief of police, who acted on orders from the priest, because he dared sell the Bible," said Capt. Riddiford.

"Is it not time that such men are put in their place, that they are taught Canada as a nation believes in the open Bible? It is time for us Protestants to rise up and demand that the Bible be given its rightful place."

"Another principle for which we stand is the sanctity of the home. I believe that the home was made by God to be a little heaven in which men go to heaven."

"The law of the land says that when two people are married according to the laws of the country they are legally married. The doctrines of the Roman Catholic Church is not married unless by a priest in the presence of three witnesses."

"Mixed marriages cause a lot of trouble because the priest is allowed to interfere. I believe it is possible for a good Catholic girl to marry a Protestant. We do not pay our priest to marry us. We are told that we need a separate school in this country to teach religion."

"I say we do not. We need only two places: the church and the home. It should not be taught even in the public schools that we need teachers for that, and some teachers have no religion."

Compliments Catholics.
"The home is the place for religion. I will pay my compliments to the Roman Catholics for the way in which they care for the young. They teach religion to their children and we Protestants are a million years behind them in that respect."

The speaker urged every Orangeman to seek a place in the church. "It is a mighty poor Orangeman who cannot find some place in the church to work."

Captain Riddiford closed with another strong appeal for unity. "I am hoping and praying for the day in which there will be no such thing as 'Methodists or Presbyterians,'" he said. "Let us make that dream a reality. Let Canada lead the way towards a united church."

On the platform with Captain Riddiford was J. W. Whitby, district master, who acted as chairman, and Rev. Mr. Mills, who led in prayer, and also the choir.

REPORTS COCHRANE EPIDEMIC NOW ABATING

Toronto Doctors Assist in Combating Ravages of Typhoid Fever.

Special to The Advertiser.
Cobalt, March 26.—Information received here yesterday from Cochrane shows that the epidemic of typhoid fever which struck that town is under control. A number of doctors and 20 nurses from Toronto, North Bay and other places are working in co-operation with the local authorities. Five more nurses reached here Saturday night.

There are about 200 cases in the town, it is said, and while there has been one death it is doubtful if the young lady who was the victim died from the disease. She is Miss Jessie Smith, who was employed in an office as a bookkeeper.

The water supply of the town has been changed. The lake from which water has been drawn to the present has been cut off and another lake tapped.

One chlorination plant is working and another was to be installed today.

Dr. W. E. George, provincial M. O. H. for the district, and Miss Hallie of the Victorian Order of Nurses are in town and have taken charge of the work of combating the epidemic.
