IN EVERY HOME

Country weeklies are pre-eminently the home papers of newspaperdom. They are not hurriedly scanned while men travel to business; then left to be taken up again. They go directly to homes where their reading is a duty as well as pleasure. Hence their peculiar value as an advertising medium. The Graphic will be found in nearly every home throughout this district.

HARD TO EQUAL

NEW BRUNSWICK
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. F. Smallwood, of Newcastle, who have been spending the winter in Los Angeles, Calif., arrived home Tuesday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Smallwood also visited friends in Vancouver, and Seattle, Wash., en route. Mr. Smallwood, although expressing his enjoyment of his trip, was very much of the opinion that it was hard to equal old New Brunswick—Chatham World.

FRASER'S HARDWOOD PLANT AT ST. LEONARD WILL BE MORE EXTENSIVE THAN REVEALED

Will Manufacture Hard and Soft Woods from All Kinds of Logs into Finished Products.

Fredericton, April 26.—Plans of the Fraser Companies Limited for establishment of a hard wood plant at St. Leonard are said to be much more extensive and elaborate than have so far been revealed.

The intention, it is learned, is to erect a plant of sufficient capacity and equipment to finish hardwood supplies from all such various timberland holdings in New Brunswick as well as in Quebec and that facilities will also be provided for finishing soft wood as well.

Huge planing equipment will be installed, it is said, and it is understood that preparations are being made to enter extensively into the manufacture of hardwood flooring and other hardwood products such as shingles and other finished products. It is also expected that the plant will be equipped for finishing soft woods, the policy which prompts this departure from the former activities of the Fraser Companies being one to complete as far as possible the finished product of the natural resources in the country.

Contrary to the impression created by The Graphic's dispatch from St. Leonard a few days ago which first revealed the plans of Fraser Companies Limited to establish a hardwood plant there, the new plant will not be for the purpose of handling hardwood from the Randolph & Baker limits on the Upper St. John river which they recently purchased but it is proposed to ship hardwood, after it has been cut at various small mills to St. Leonard and there complete the manufacture. Of course the Randolph & Baker limits' hardwood supply will go there with the rest. How soon an actual start will be made at St. Leonard on construction of the proposed plant there has not been decided, so far as can be learned.

RIVERS OF RUM FROM THE NORTH

By A. B. MacDonald.
"Rivers of Rum from the North" by A. B. MacDonald appeared under the heading of special articles, in the September 1923 number of the Ladies Home Journal. The article was run in the Canadian White Ribbon Tides the official organ of the Canadian National Women's Christian Temperance Union.

(Given below in part.)
My first contact with the flood of liquor from Canada was in Maine.

One day I was riding on an electric car out of Portland, when a farmer got on at a crossroads and staggered into the seat beside me.

After a while he said: "I had a few drinks of good Canadian booze to-day."
"Where did you get it?" I asked him.

"A rum runner, pulled it along the road," he answered, and then, in his drunken way, he began to tell how a neighboring farmer and found a "hide" of 600 bottles of whiskey. At Portland that afternoon I was just in time to get the last boatload in the evening and arrives in St. John, in Canada, at noon the next day.

When I climbed down out of an upper berth the next morning our train had crossed the line at Vancouver and was speeding through a wilderness of stunted spruce and birch and tamarack trees. After breakfast I went through the train from end to end. The men and women who filled it were not Canadians. They had too much of a "red light" look, and were too heavily dressed for that. Sober-minded Canadians do not wear so many diamonds as those men and women were.

Ray A. Haynes, head of the Prohibition Enforcement Bureau of the United States, said to me a few days ago in Washington: "You may find a good bit of booze coming in from the Canadian provinces of New Brunswick."

The chief port of that province is St. John, on the Bay of Fundy. It is one of the headwaters of the Niagara of booze that flows southward over the border. The first afternoon I was there I saw three schooners loading at the docks with whisky for the United States. They were Canadian, and were being loaded with liquor from the St. John docks. I went down to where they lay, at Bead's wharf, and watched the trucks drive up loaded high with whisky in sacks and down into the hold.

I went away to another dock, where another stream of whisky cases was pouring down the hatches of the schooners and then to see the

43 YEARS IN THE BANKING BUSINESS

W. S. Thomas of Fredericton Retires from Bank of Nova Scotia

William S. Thomas, manager of the Fredericton Branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, will retire from banking next month after forty-three years' service. Mr. Thomas has been a resident of Fredericton for twelve years, coming here as manager for the Bank of New Brunswick and remaining here after the amalgamation with the Bank of Nova Scotia took place. Mr. Thomas belonged to St. John originally and entered the service of the Bank of N. B. in its head office there. After rising through the various grades he became manager at Campbellton, where he stayed for some time, later being manager at Sussex where he remained until appointed to the Fredericton branch in 1912. Since becoming a resident of Fredericton Mr. Thomas has occupied a prominent place in the commercial life of the community and also in its social life. He has been president of the Curling Club, in which he has taken a prominent part and also has been a member of other organizations. Mr. Thomas stated today that his intentions concerning place of residence after retirement were not decided. Should they leave Fredericton for and Mrs. Thomas will be greatly missed.

Every drop of this liquor was bound for the United States, and everyone in St. John including custom officials, knew it. It was all done openly and above-board, with the one subtlety that the vessels, cleared for the port of Havana, but that was merely to comply with a formality of Canadian law which requires that all liquor exports by water must clear for some port outside the United States out of respect of our Federal laws.

Thirty-six Thousand Quarts a Trip

That same afternoon at the Market Slip, I ran into Mulcahey, the port warden of St. John.

"Aye!" he exclaimed when I told him of the three whiskey laden schooners. "Thirty-six thousand of them vessels engaged in run-running out of this port. I've seen eight of them loading with whiskey all at one time, and they carry an average of three thousand cases at a load; that's thirty-six thousand quarts apiece, or two hundred and eighty-eight thousand quarts of booze for the eight vessels, enough to keep New York tipsy for one whole day, hey?" And he laughed. There's one over there now the Marma, of eighty tons, and pointed across the slip to a schooner tied to the dock. "She has just come in from a trip and is fitted for another. There's the Marlon Mosher just ahead of her. Here's a Swedish ship that ran a cargo of Holland gin into some port along the Yankee coast and has put in here for another cargo of booze."

I asked him how much the vessel owners got for a run-running voyage.

"Well, one of these schooners goes out with, say, thirty thousand quarts if she got a dollar a quart, that would be thirty thousand dollars for the trip; but, in fact, they get about ten thousand dollars for it, and a captain can soon get rich at that if his ship is a success; for some of them make the round trip in eight or ten days. That's better than fishing for cod on the Grand Banks," he said.

"They all clear for the West Indies; they couldn't make that and get back in ten days," I suggested. "Pshaw! That's only a blind. They all go to the United States, every one of them. Why should they take whiskey to the West Indies. That's where they make booze to burn. That would be like carrying coals to Newcastle."

I was watching the crew of a rum-runner putting the gear in order, and I said to Mulcahey: "They're a rough-looking bunch!" "Rough and tough," he replied. "Only tough men would go into that. They have their liberty, their property and their lives in the balance when they sail out on a run-running cruise. It's piracy, pure and simple; and it's a damned bad law that allows it to go on. Say, if you and I had farms side by side and I allowed my sheep-killing dogs to run over into your flock, I'd be a blamed poor neighbor wouldn't I? Well, I'm a Canadian all right, but I consider Canada is in mighty poor business when she allows this booze to go by the shipload and the carload over into the lands of our good neighbor, Uncle Sam, when he is trying to enforce prohibition. They say Canada is paying off the war debt with the money she makes letting smuggled booze go over the line; but I'd rather stay in debt than pay off that way."

That same afternoon I saw a tramp steamer from England unloading eight thousand cases of Scotch whiskey, ninety-six thousand quarts, bottles on a St. John dock. It was in bond, and billed to Havana. It would go into an export warehouse and then go by steamer into the United States.

There is a string of these export liquor warehouses along the Canadian border from the Atlantic to the Pacific. These warehouses are the side doors to Canada's liquor stores. In the old days, when the saloons were required to close their doors it opened its side door to the alley. Even in the Canadian provinces that have prohibition a man may open a warehouse and import any amount of
