EDITOR'S MAIL. Editor Graphic, Campbellton, N. B. Dear Editor: In reading our local Canadian History, in helping my children to prepare their school lessons, I think I find an error on the part of the historian, which should be of local interest, if I am correct. On page 230, the following occurs, "The French vessels driven up the Restigouche to Petit Roche nearly opposite where Campbellton now stands, were captured or destroyed." This no doubt refers to "Petit Rochelle," a village of 1500 souls, situated on the site of the farm now owned by Mr. Babcock, but better known as the Pat Smith farm. Any history I have read, touching events of that day, July 16th always spelled the name, as I have written it, and local writers, in referring to that settlement always make it as I have. If Petit Rochelle is right, why teach the children it should be Petit Roche. Perhaps you can enlighten the readers, or refer it to the Supt. Mr. Carter. Yours, etc., DAD.

HATS. A good hat. The Borsalino. FERGUSON & WALLACE. PAINT NOT SEIZED. The Canadian government paint said to have been stolen from one of the C. M. M. steamers and sold to a local contractor was not seized, but the local collector of customs was informed by the contractor that he had the paint, and offered to send it to the Customs, just as soon as it was discovered that there was any doubt about its source of supply.
