no longer the case, real estate depreciation caused many a property holder much unessiness and discouraged further building. One cause of this has been the emigration—if I may so term it—of St. John people to Portland: When rents advanced in this city, hundreds of poor people decided to move scross the civic line and enjoy cheaper resideness and pay less taxes. The result is that Portland's population has increased at the expense of St. John, and the proportionate number of vacant flats in our sister city is much smaller than in our own.
