TOWN OF PORT ARTHUR.

BUSINESS FLOURISHING UPON LAKE

olitan Population—Carnival of PORT ARTHUR, June 27 .- Life in this busy town is an interesting thing at the present time. There is not a more cosmopolitan town in Canada. Less than onehalf of the people are English, Irish or Scotch; the rest arc Swedish, French, German, Chinese, Indian, half breed, Russian, Polish, Scandanavian, Jew or negro. I can youch that all these elements are here at present, and I believe that there are others if I took the trouble to find them out. I mention them according to their numerical strength, the Swedish being the next to the English speaking class of people. Not less strange than the admixture of races are the habitations in which they live. Civilization is as yet pitched here in a very rough state. All of the buildings excepting six are of wood, and these wooden structures are generally of the flimsiest kind, but the owners of them extort the most evtravagant rents. here at present, and I believe that there of the flimsiest kind, but the owners of them extort the most evtravagant rents.

For a shanty ten feet by twelve, of which the outside and inside are both rough boards with a layer of tar paper between, the tenant has to pay $15 a month. I know a row of ten of these costing the owner just $600 to build; in four months they bring in from the rents enough to cover their total cost. Board is in the same proportion, and the accommodation is hard to be got, but I must say that the meals served are of a superior kind. Money is plentiful on account of the great number of men employed in Canadian Pacific railway construction on the north shore of Lake Superior, this being the principal point of supply.

The docks form a busy looking scene, compared to which those of Toronto look them. There are seven docks yearning. in Canadian Pacific railway construction on the north shore of Lake Superior, this being the principal point of supply.

The docks form a busy looking scene, compared to which those of Toronto look tame. There are seven docks varying from about 500 to 1200 feet in length, and from about 500 to 1200 feet in length, and they are loaded with all classes of merchandise. It is said (I know not how true it is), that this port now does the next largest business to Montreal. To give you an idea of the shipping carried on, there are three lines of steamers from below, the Canadian Pacific railway line, the Collingwood line, and the N. W. T. Co. of Sarnia; these have ten large stranger between them have ten large steamers between them. Then there is a line of boats from Mont-Then there is a line of boats from Moureral, arriving weekly. There are three lines of steamers plying between here and places on the north shore of Lake Superior. Add to these regular lines a great number the steamer of the steame Add to these regular lines a great number of vessels continually bringing special cargoes, and it may be judged what an active scene Thunder bay displays.

Fort William is not yet able to have any vessels excepting a small number reach it; this is on account of the well known bar at this is on account of the well known bar at the mouth of the Kaministiquia, where there is now only nine feet of water. Thus only smaller vessels or those which are only light laden can enter the river. The people of Fort William are, however, hopeful, and expect that the dredging about to be commenced in a few days more about to be commenced in a few days more will do great things for the place. The Canadian Pacific railway have just comtion of dockage to ex- this cor offence; every third or fourth individual on the crowded streets in the evening stag-gering from the vile effects of the vilest kind of whisky, which they who have tasted it say is badly drugged. The more serious kind of crimes also prevail, hardly a day passing without some kind of bur-glary, highway robbery, stabbing, or other villainous deed startling the public. Two days ago a murder was committed, and a voung man named Troy was arrested, and young man named Troy was arrested, and an inquest having been held, he stands committed for trial on the verdict of the jury. The victim was an old man.

The administration of justice is as peculiar and ridiculous as ever it was in any new country. It is also rotten in some respects, as I will explain a little further on. I wish now to describe the proceedings at the coroner's inquest in the above case. The coroner is an honest enough doctor, but as coroner he showed a sight of solemn stultification. The court opene and he gave a long address as to the ques-tion of his having any jurisdiction, but after expressing some doubt he satisfied himself that he sat there clothed with full counsel got up and sarcastically thanked the other lawyer, and said he could ask the the other lawyer, and said he could ask the privilege for himself. The coroner looked owlishly from one to the other, granted the required permission, and they all seemed pleased. The examination of witnesses then proceeded, it being interlarded every now and then by short addresses from the lawyers totally unconnected with the evidence. They are both most fearful extitivers and the patience of the coroner stutterers, and the patience of the coroner and jury seemed exhausted with them.

The second witness's examination lasted a little over half an hour, but so weary a little over half an hour, but so weary were the coroner and jury with the lawyers that they proceeded right there to sit upon the men of legal lore. The loquacious law student aforesaid got up (this was his fourth time) and administration of the coroner repulse to tered what he thought a severe rebuke to the lawyers. One of them stuttered out what he considered a severe retort, appealed to his learned brother, and the two lawyers stood side by side the picture of mutual admiration and injured innocence. mutual admiration and injured innocence. After a few moments it struck the coroner to imitate the lawyers by delivering an address, and he did so, reflecting on them very strongly, but, as he said, he meant nothing personal. The prosecuting lawyer did not look at it in that light, and considered his dignity and reputation hurt. He said he would not acced further in the case, and casting a marked that he would do nothing more than "watch" the case. The coroner went on, however, without the lawyer's assistance. The lawyer was not as good as his word, however, for very soon he was sound asleep, and the court seemed better satisfied with his snoring than his stuttering. The proceedings then went on in a hurry and the jury brought in a verdict against the prisoner. I may say that the account given by the doctor who made the post mortem showed, without any cross-examination, that it had been very defectively made, and the prisoner's chances of escape are therefore very strong.

made, and the prisoner's chances of escape are therefore very strong.

Whilst crime is so rife, there is not an adequate vigor in our police system to cope with it. The police magistrate is the greater part of his time absent down east attending to his private affairs, and besides this there is a thousand and one rumors which make him malodorous in the eyes of the people. The most serious of these is a charge that two flourishing houses of prostitution pay him $100 a month each as hush money. The newspapers published

Mr. Yarker is busy at work examining into the affairs of the Federal bank, and it will be some days yet before he is in a position to make an announcement. In the neantime things are going on quietly, and there is a more hopeful feeling abroad in there is a more hopeful feeling abroad in regard to the bank. As to the statement telegraphed from Montreal yesterday about security being asked and given by the bank and its general manager, Mr. Yarker says that it is only the ordinary security that was given.

Montreal, July 3.—Federal bank matters are assuming a more quiescent position, and there would appear to be a revulsion of feeling in the direction of confidence in the bank doing better than was at one time expected. One of the reasons assigned for Mr. Ingram being dropped by the directors is because of a refusal on his part to countenance a stock transaction in which the bank was to manipulate 15,000 shares of its own stock and hold in the name of a certain individual in London who made the proposition. who made the proposition.

The Morse Soap Company's Display. It is generally conceded that the part tend about three miles along the river, the number of piles which are collected along the banks being enormous. Still, for the present, life at Fort William is as dull as it is active at Port Arthur, but I expect that later on in the summer there will be quite a boom among the river people. The old line of railway from Fort William to Port Arthur is to be taken up; the new line will run down the river to the Hudson bay fort, and from a point near there will strike towards Port Arthur.

A carnival of crime is prevailing in this town just now. There are thirty-two hotels, most of them being low groggeries and free and easy dives. The jail is continually filled far beyond its accommodation, and the revenues of the town are increased by the daily sittings of the police court, which has as much to do as any other city than Toronto. Drunkenness of course is the chief oftence; every third or fourth individual on the crowded streets in the evening staggering from the vile effects of the vilest tend about three miles along the river, the entitles them to first place—for uniformity

The electric lights on Queen west and King streets, lighted by the Canada electric light company went out last night shortly after being lighted.

Mr. Lunt, the manager of the company, on being interviewed by Chief Ashfield said that their private lines were working all right. He could not account for the lights going out; and thought that the lines had been tampered with, as the same dynamoran both the street and private lines. He said that he had men out along the line in vestigating the matter.

At 10.30 the lights were going again.
The Toronto electric light company lit up York street and the Esplanade last night for the first time. They ran three engines on six dynamos giving 130 lights.

The What Is It? Pride & Sackett's pavilion on York street opposite the Rossin house, was thronged with crowds of spectators yesterday to see the wonderful curiosities on extinition authority. The jury was then empannelled, a loquacious law student being chosen foreman. The crown attorney not yet having received his appointment, and without any instructions from the crown for any one to act the solicitor for the private prosecutor rose, and he also expressed some doubts as to his locus standi, but impressively asked the coroner to let him prosecute; he also asked that dignitary to let the prisoner's counsel defend the case. The prisoner's counsel got up and sarcastically thanked

The Visiting Pickpockets. The activity shown by the police in putting the visiting pickpockets behind the bars is having a good effect, and

At 8.30 last night a very pretty sight was witnessed in different parts of the city. A star shot from the southern heavens and passed due north, disappearing, as The World seemed to see it, behind the spire of St. James' cathedral. It left an illuminated trail which was visible for nearly five minutes.

The concert in the gardens to-night by the Mendelssohn quintette club of Boston, the Mendelssohn quintette club of Boston, assisted by Fanny Kellogg, soprano, Ivan E. Morawski, basso, and Mr. Lauder, will be a rare musical treat. Mr. Geise will play his best 'cello solo and as he is one of the world's finest violincello players an opportunity to hear him should not be missed. The admission tickets have been placed at fifty cents. Those going should secure their seats early this morning at Sucklings'.
