

years, upon what it calls "the criminal problem." They have written papers and given learned discourses upon the question, "Can the Criminal be Reclaimed?" I turn to you and say that the problem lies in your hands, not theirs. The men who will turn to the Power from above that can make them strong, pure, brave, and victorious, can come out a great army of resolute souls who shall prove by their future how truly the past can be redeemed; and the path they make through the difficulties and obstacles which must, for a time, face them, will make it all the easier for the many feet that will in the future follow them.
