

OUR TWO OLDEST MISSIONARIES.

WE have eleven missionaries who have laboured more than twenty years in the Foreign Field. Messrs. Morton and Grant and their wives, in Trinidad, Mr. MacKenzie, and Messrs. Annand and Robertson and their wives in the New Hebrides, and Dr. Mackay in Formosa.

You have had a picture of Mr. and Mrs. Mackenzie of the New Hebrides, the latter of whom was so recently taken home to heaven. Then in your last Record you had a picture of Dr. and Mrs. Mackay from Formosa, a long long distance from the New Hebrides.

Now we take another long journey, to Trinidad, an Island almost directly on the opposite side of the world from Formosa, and give you pictures of two of our missionaries there, our two oldest Foreign Missionaries. Dr. and Mrs. Morton have seen more than twenty-five years Foreign service, and Dr. and Mrs. Grant more than twenty-two years, and Mr. McKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. Annand, Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, of the New Hebrides, and Dr. Mackay, of Formosa, about twenty-one years each.

Dr. Morton's childhood's home was on a high hill top in Pictou Co., Nova Scotia, with a beautiful outlook over land and sea. Two or three miles distant lay the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Sometimes its waters were smooth and glassy, as they stretched away for leagues to the distant horizon, with a white sail here and there as the ships calmly floated on their way. Then the scene would change, and the waves, would rush and foam, and the ships plunge madly through them as if fleeing from the storm.
