"THE LAMP,"

New and Improved Series, in Weekly Numbers, price ld. In Monthly parts, price 6d. The Lamp in 1865.

It is little more than two years ago since the New Series of the Lamp commenced. The great increase in its circulation has been the most convincing proof that satisfaction has been given by the improvements effected in the periodical. It has been the happiness of the Oonductor of this Magazine to receive the benediction of the Holy Father on the undertaking. A distinguished Preiate wrote from Rome as follows to the Proprietor of the Lamp: 'I have presented the Lamp to the Holy Father. He was much pleased. and directed me to send you his blessing, that you and all your works may prosper.' We have also had the assurance of the satisfaction of his Eminence the late Cardinal Wiseman, in whose archdiocese the Lamp is published, and whose kind assistance to the undertaking has been evinced several times by the contributions from his pen which are to be found in our columns. We are authorised to say that "His Eminence has been much pleased with the progress of the Lamp, and the position it has taken.' Encouraged, therefore, by the blessing of the Vicar of Ohrist, which is never unfinitful, and the approval of his Eminence, the Conductor of the Lamp looks confidently for increased support from the Oatholic public. Much has been done to improve the Lamp; nuch remains to be done; and it rests chiefly with Catholics themselves to effect the improvement. Our adversaries, and even we ourselves, often point to the well-got-up Protestant publications, and ask why Catholics cannot have something as good in point of material, ability, illustrations, &c. Nothing is more easy. If every Oatholic who feels this, and who desires to to see a Oatholio Magazine equal to a Protestant one, will take in the former for a year, there is at least a good chance of his wishes being realised. If every priest would speak of the under taking in his parish once a year, and encourage his people to buy the Lamp instead of the various cheap publications too rapidly making their way among our youth, and our poor-pulications which can hardly be called Protestant, because they have no religion, and often openly teach immorality-the success of the Catholic Magazine would be assured. It is their immense virculation, and the support they obtain from their respepective political or religions parties, which enables these journals to hold their ground ; and unless Catholics will give their hearty and cordial support to their own periocals in a similar manner, it is impossible for them to attain superiority.

The LANP has now the largest Circulation of any Catholic Periodical in the English language. It contains this week a New Story of great interest, and other articles of sterling merit, with illustrations by the first Artists of the day. Price 1d., in Monthly parts, 6d.
