would both 'level the playing field' for national firms and reduce opportunities for sanctioned regimes to play responsible members of the international community off against one another.