

to carry out a quasi-diplomatic function. You are receiving visitors from abroad.

I led a delegation to South Korea, and the business of that delegation did not end the night the government was defeated. I had to come back to Ottawa to complete the work. It was a labour of love, but it was not paid labour. I think the supposition that the Deputy Speaker's duties end when a session of parliament ends should be examined with a view to making redress. I do not ask it for myself, and I would refuse it if it were offered, but I ask it in light of your particular circumstances.

There is much more I could say, Mr. Speaker. I never did get around to talking about the ten minute speech as the cornerstone of parliamentary debate, but perhaps I will have an opportunity to do so later in the session.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sure hon. members will allow me to say how thankful I am to the hon. member for his remarks.

It being 9.45 p.m. it is my duty, pursuant to section 6 of Standing Order 60, to interrupt these proceedings and forthwith put the question on the subamendment now before the House.

All those in favour of the amendment to the amendment will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Call in the members.

The House divided on the amendment to the amendment (Mr. Nystrom) which was negated on the following division:
