Dear Principal

The Bureau aims, as you are well aware, at doing all that may be done to promote the interests of university teachers who come to England. We are able, for example, to place them in touch with other visitors from overseas and with members of the Home Universities whom they would like to meet, to introduce them as readers in the library of the British Museum, to secure their admission as temporary members of the Royal Colonial Institute which, with its library of 150,000 volumes and its generous supply of periodicals, offers also the amenities of a first-rate club. Visitors are asked to regard the Bureau as their Headquarters to which letters may be addressed, and at which enquiries may be made regarding travel-routes, hotels, etc.

We should be glad if you would arrange for the display of the enclosed leaflet and would give copies^x to members of the University whom you know to be contemplating a voyage to Europe.

Yours sincerely
Alex Hill
