

the difficulties he had to encounter, was entirely destitute of the means of obviating a great proportion of them; and trusted altogether to the good sense of the enlightened part of the inhabitants for assistance. A number of gentlemen encouraged the attempt, and subscribed for copies to cover the expenditures; how far it has succeeded must be left to the public judgment—the following errors being such as have been discovered since the work was in the press are corrected here.

Montreal,
November 24, 1819. }