near a Million in France* would probably at Times have paffed over thither, and helped to counterbalance the Strength and Number of their popifh Countrymen. Thefe People, with the English who would naturally have continued fettling there, would in a very few Years have formed a fufficient Number of Protestants to have ferved on Juries, and to have composed an Affembly) or House of Commons) wholly Protestant; without the Necessity of admitting even one Papist. The Priests as they had died off, might have been fupplied from England with Divines of our own Church; and as we use the Cross in Baptism, the Surplice &c. in Divine Service, it would not have been fo violent a Transition; and a People eafy and happy in their temporal Concerns, would probably by Degrees have been weaned from Popery .--- I fpeak with fome Authority—as knowing it was the Expectation of fome of the Canadians, and that they were not much difpleafed with the Thoughts of it. Add to this, had fome little Advantages been thrown * Wrote in 1774.

in