

The Lobby

THE first impression as one opens the door and steps inside the lobby is of a big, pleasant room full of everything to make it attractive. Facing the entrance is the business office with a secretary in charge, ready to answer questions, assist in finding a place to live, or to do anything possible for the newcomer to help make him feel at home.

A file contains papers from all parts of Canada and nearby States, while a magazine rack offers access to many of the popular magazines. These are only two features of the reading corner in the lobby, where easy chairs and quiet make study profitable and recreational reading enjoyable. A library is also at hand, where may be found many valuable books of reference.
