THE TORONTO WORLD ONE CENT MORNING PAPER. No. 21 YONGE STREET, Toronto.

THE SITUATION.
On July 12 Premier Hardy published a memorandum informing the country of his intention to summon the Legislature on Aug. 2. In this memorandum he announced the Government's intention to introduce legislation declaring the validity of the votes cast by the election constables at the recent general elections. In pursuance of that memorandum the Legislature was summoned on Aug. 2 and it has been in session for one week and four days. But the Government has not only not introduced a bill to give effect to its intention in the matter of the constable vote, but it has announced that no such bill will be introduced at all. The significant fact of the session so far is that the Government has abandoned the legislation whose urgency it assigned as a reason for summoning the Legislature in the dog days.

But Mr. Hardy has announced that the session is not to be a barren one. He will introduce a bill affecting the constable vote, not in the form of a bill, but in the form of a resolution, and according to a brand new political principle. Just what this new bill is to be in detail no one but the Premier seems to know, and it is doubtful if he himself at this moment has a definite idea of what its contents will disclose when it is laid before the Legislature. As far as we can interpret the explanations of the Premier in regard to the forthcoming bill it would seem that the Government proposes to ascertain from the courts whether the constables were or were not legally entitled to vote at the recent elections. The proposed bill will deal with the constable vote according to the finding of the court. If it is found that the constables had the right to vote, then the bill will be inoperative. But if it is found that they had not the right to vote then the bill will constitute their not having enjoyed such right as an irregularity sufficient to justify the Government in declaring the elections void. This, in short, is the principle upon which the Government will establish its proposed legislation. The recent elections are to be declared irregular and void because the constables had not the opportunity of voting.

If we admit for the time being that this is an irregularity, and that it is sufficient to void the elections, then it should be made applicable to all the elections. The adoption of this new principle by the Government would naturally lead it to declare the whole 94 seats vacant, because the irregularity is exactly the same in all the elections. If the Government treated its newly found principle honestly and consistently, its proposed bill would provide for a dissolution of the Legislature in the event of the judges declaring the constable vote illegal.

But the Government does not propose to live up to the principle it has just unearthed. The fact that the constables did not legally vote at the recent elections will be construed as an irregularity only in certain cases.

At the present time there are some eight seats that are more or less uncertain because of the constable vote. Every seat is uncertain in which the majority is less than the total number of constable voters. If the irregularity is to be applied at all, it surely should apply to all these cases at least.

The Government will administer its new elixir very sparingly. It will apply the medicine to but a select and limited number of patients. The judges, in short, are to be asked to ascertain the particular elections in which the irregularity would entail the unseating of a Liberal member, and in those cases, and in those alone, the irregularity will be held to void the elections. That is to say, the irregularity of the constable vote will be applied only in such cases as will benefit the Government and its supporters.

If the elimination of the constable ballots in the West York election should result in giving Mr. St. John, the Opposition candidate, the seat by one vote, the fact that the constables hadn't legally voted would not be construed as an irregularity, and would not void the election.

But if the elimination of these same ballots resulted in giving Mr. Hill, the Liberal member, the seat by one vote, the fact that the constables hadn't legally voted would not be construed as an irregularity, and would not void the election.

We think the Government's proposition need only be unfolded in this light to prove that it is unprecedented, unjust and inconsistent. It is, in addition, retroactive and open to all the objections that were made against the Government's first proposal to legalize the constable vote.

We challenge Mr. Hardy to produce a precedent for declaring an election void because a handful of officials, probably not more than 1 per cent. of the electorate, hadn't enjoyed the legal right to vote therein. Mr. Hardy justified his first proposal by a precedent which, on examination, turned out to be the very antithesis of the case in point. Mr. Hardy's venture to state, will search British and Canadian history in vain for a precedent that will apply in any shape or form to his last proposal.

While Mr. Hardy's latest political nostrum is indefensible, from a moral and legal point of view, his application of it is scandalously partisan, and shameful. If British and Canadian law is founded on honesty, consistency and justice, then Mr. Hardy's proposed bill can never become part and parcel of it. It is just as indefensible and as vicious as the first measure which the Premier had to

SIR CHARLES MADE A SPEECH

The Conservative Leader Among His Constituents in Cape Breton.

Outlined the Policy of the Party at a Convention in Sydney—Re-affirmed the Statement Made in Montreal That Nothing Will Be Done to Embarrass the Canadian Delegates at the Quebec Conference.

Sydney, C.B., Aug. 13.—The Cape Breton Conservatives met in convention today and elected officers. Sir Charles Macdonald was appointed president.

Sir Charles Macdonald was present and spoke at considerable length. Sir Charles delivered a fine address, being careful to avoid extensive reference to questions political. He prefaced his remarks by reference to the late Sir John Macdonald, who at the time of the Pacific scandal tendered his resignation as leader of the party, but who was compelled by his followers to reconsider the step and retain the position. "And no one was more active in urging this reconsideration than I was, for I recognized the very great loss to the country were we to lose such a step," Sir Charles said. He had followed Sir John Macdonald's precedent when the fortunes of war had placed him and his party in the cool shades of opposition, but that, as in the former case, he was overruled by the rank and file of the party unanimously requesting him to remain as leader.

THE QUEBEC CONFERENCE.
Speaking of the coming Quebec conference, he said that although he had arranged an active campaigning program for this session, he considered that in the interest of the country and as it was the aim of the party always to sink party advantage where the interests of the country were at stake, he should postpone the arrangements made. He referred to the effect of the unexpected Spanish-American war and the consequent friendly relations between the United States and Great Britain and the colonies and the consequent favorable opportunity for settling important questions between Canada and the country to the south. He compared this with the existing conditions on the occasion of a former conference at Washington. In this case the opposition would strengthen the hand of the Government. He urged attention to the electoral issue, owing to the changed election law, and urged that every individual take a deep interest in the election, seeing that no name was left off, and thus secure a grand party triumph when elected.

He briefly compared the Liberal regime to the Conservative rule and said: "I am unable to put my finger on one single act of the Liberal Government that has benefited the country, except where they followed the steps and policy of the Conservative party." Sir Charles admitted the present prosperity of Canada, but said that the Liberal party obtained office by a ruse, and he hesitated not to say that the Conservatives would be returned at the next electoral fight by as signal a victory as in 1878.

TO FEED THOUSANDS.
Sir Thomas Lipton Explains How the Alexandria Trust Will Be Worked—Cheap and Good.

London, Aug. 13.—Sir Thomas Lipton was interviewed today with reference to "The Alexandria trust," when the following statement was obtained:

"The object is to feed the poor, and it is hoped that it will be carried out in a way that will be an example to other countries all over the world how to feed the poor."

"We will give them a good meal for four cents, consisting of a plate of soup, a small plate of meat and potatoes, or eight cents we will give them soup, a good plate of meat and two vegetables, including potatoes."

"There will be no waiters or waitresses. On entering the building the people will receive a ticket according to the amount paid. They will then go to a horse-shoe shaped counter in the centre of the floor, and on presenting the ticket get their food and will carry it to a table."

"There will be two rooms—one for women and the other for men—each capable of holding 1000."

Everything in Style.
"Each room will be fitted up in first-class style, and will contain lavatories, writing desk, etc."

"There will also be a labor bureau. One headquarters will be able to supply food for 10,000 persons a day. The hours between breakfast and the evening meal will be set aside for feeding poor children."

"Other branch establishments all over London will serve 2000 people a day."

Important Part of the Scheme.
"Not the least important part of the scheme is what I may call the outside department, whereby poor people will be given facilities to take food to the homes of the invalids who will be supplied with beef tea."

"Three meals will be supplied daily, including Sunday. At the headquarters of the scheme will be a band of music occasionally. "If the scheme works as I expect it will, I have promised another $500,000."

A CRIPPLE FOR LIFE.
Mr. Cornelius Vandervilt Will Never Recover—No Reconciliation With His Son.

Newport, R.I., Aug. 13.—Mr. Cornelius Vandervilt, who suffered a stroke of paralysis two years ago, and has been in Europe almost constantly ever since receiving treatment, has returned, and is now occupying his splendid palace, comfortable, but almost helpless, and without hope of recovery. One leg and arm are entirely useless, and he walks with great difficulty, leaning upon the arm of one of his family or a man servant. In other respects his health is as good as it was before the attack. His mind is clear, his appetite is normal, and he is able to give instructions to his attorneys and others who have charge of his enormous business. He also retains his interest in the philanthropic work to which he devoted so much time and money before the stroke, and he receives monthly reports from his oldest son and namesake, who has assisted him in the management of his business. He is said to be a man of great energy and benevolent intentions, which he founded or has assisted with princely generosity. The reports that were published about a reconciliation with his oldest son and namesake, who was married against his wishes just before his illness, unfortunately are untrue. Young Mr. Vandervilt and his wife are in Newport with their child, Cornelius Vandervilt 4th, but the father has not seen them, and so far as the world knows has expressed no desire to do so. Many of his friends believe, however, that sooner or later Mr. Vandervilt will send for his son and restore him to his place in the family. The young man and his wife have conducted themselves with becoming discretion and are well thought of by the circle in which they move.
