PORTUGAL'S KING AND CROWN PRINCE SLAIN, YOUNGER SON WOUNDED, QUEEN ESCAPES

FUSILLADE OF BULLETS SWEEPS ROYAL CARRIAGE IN SIGHT OF THOUSANDS

King and Royal Family Returning to Lisbon From Holiday Trip When Six Men Fire Volley From Carabines—Swift Retribution For Three.

QUEEN FIGHTS FOR HER SONS NEW KING BUT SLIGHTLY HURT

LISBON, Feb. 2.—King Carlos of Portugal and the Crown Prince Luiz Philippe, were assassinated on Saturday afternoon at 5.30, and the city is in a state of uproar.

The king's second son, the infant Manuel, was slightly wounded, but Queen Amelie, who strove to save the crown prince's life by throwing herself upon him, was unhurt.

A band of men, waiting at the corner of the Praco do Commercio and the Rua do Arsenal, suddenly sprang towards the open carriage, in which the royal family were driving to the palace, and leveling carbines, which they had concealed upon them, fired.

The king and crown prince, upon whom the attack was directed, were each shot three times and they lived only long enough to be carried to the marine arsenal nearby, where they expired.

Almost at the first shot the king fell back on the cushions dying, and at the same moment the crown prince was seen to half rise and then sink back on the seat.

Queen Amelie jumped up and threw herself toward the crown prince in an apparent effort to save his life at the cost of her own, but the prince already had received his death wound.

No more beautiful day could be imagined than that which hereafter will mark the date on which King Carlos and Crown Prince Luiz met their death at the hands of assassins.

Returning from a sojourn at the king's estate at Villa Vicosa, accompanied by the queen, the crown prince and the infant Manuel, the sovereign seemingly was in happy mood, when he stepped into the carriage in waiting at the railroad station. Thousands of spectators, gaily attired, in combination with the bright decorations set out to welcome the royal family, made an animated scene. The people were allowed to circulate as freely as they pleased, and, for a short time, so great were the crowds, the driver of the carriage had difficulty in making a start.

The entire court, ministers and ladies-in-waiting, and many army officers, were in the station when the train drawing the royal family pulled in. The weather was glorious, almost like summer, with warm, soft breezes blowing in from the ocean.

It was because of the beautiful weather that an open carriage was in waiting for the royal family, and when they took their places they were greeted with some lifting of hats, but mostly in silence.

Then, as the carriage turned into the Rua do Arsenal, there was a cracking of guns, and a shower of bullets made their way into the bodies of the king and crown prince, and the little prince, who proved an easy target.

The assassins, numbering six in all, boldly ran up to the sides of the carriage and poured in a hail of lead before the stupefied escort could intervene.

The king and crown prince, half rising, fell back into the cushions, the blood gushing from many wounds.

QUEEN'S HEROIC CONDUCT.

The coachman brought his whip across the flanks of his horses, and, with a bound, they dashed away, disappearing into the arsenal quadrangle.

The panic-stricken people, who had fled on all sides, could see the queen leaning over the crown prince and her younger son, who also was bleeding from wounds by assassins' bullets.

How many shots were fired no one can say, but it was a veritable fusillade, coming from the right side of the street. The effort of the crown prince, who was sitting opposite to the king, to rise, was pitiable, and without avail, for he adjusted himself sufficiently to pitch forward and fall over the prostrate body of his father.

Queen Amelie, uttering a scream that could be heard by all, who had become frenzied by the attack, threw herself towards her sons, shielding their bodies with her own.

She frantically struck at the murderers with a bouquet of roses, which she had been carrying, but even in the face of this the men fired again and again.

As he saw his father and his brother fall, Prince Manuel whipped out a revolver and discharged it at the men, but was himself struck on the right arm by a bullet from a carbine. A footman in the carriage also was wounded, and it was stated that a bullet grazed the queen's shoulder, but did not do her harm.

MURDERERS PURSUED.

Only mounted police accompanied the carriage, as the king had refused military escort. The attack came from the rear, for it was found afterwards that the king had been shot in the back of the neck, and it was so entirely unexpected that the murderers had emptied their carbines and revolvers almost before the police knew what was going on, and had turned to flee into the crowds that, now panic-stricken, had pressed back before their weapons.

Then the guards charged upon them, pursuing them down the street and ridding three of them with bullets. Hundreds of the people joined in the pursuit and the others of the band of assassins were made prisoners.

The royal carriage had by this time been driven into the quadrangle, and the gates of the arsenal were shut. The grief of the queen and Prince Manuel was heartbreaking. Within a few minutes the queen mother, the dowager queen, Maria Pia; the Duke of Oporto, the king's brother, and the ministers of state assembled, all weeping bitterly.

LISBON IS QUIET.

The news of the assassination spread like wildfire, and thousands of people, bewildered and terrified, poured into the streets. Soon the troops and police occupied all the prominent places, and the people hurried to their homes.

The Late King Carlos of Portugal, and His Queen, Who Had Such a Miraculous Escape From the Murderous Volley.

EVENTS WHICH LED TO ROYAL TRAGEDY PREMIER IS BLAMED

Parliament Dismissed in May and "Dictator" Assumed Control—Assassination Climax of Widespread Plotting.

Carlos I. was born Sept. 23, 1863, the son of King Luiz I. and his Queen, Maria Pia. He married Maria Amelie, daughter of Philippe, Duc d'Orleans, on May 22, 1886. He succeeded to the throne Oct. 19, 1889.

The crown prince, Luiz Philippe, Duke of Braganza, was born March 21, 1887.

In April, 1893, an attempt was made on King Carlos' life as he was being driven thru Lisbon, but it met with complete failure.

On Jan. 20, 1896, an anarchist made an attempt upon the king while the latter was returning from the palace in an open carriage after a drive.
The anarchist threw a heavy stone which narrowly missed the king's head, but hit the side of the carriage with him, injuring him severely.

On her return from a visit to London early in December Queen Amelie took back a letter to King Carlos from King Edward in which the British King gave it as his opinion that the dictatorship endangered the crown and recommended a return to the constitutional step.

Senior Joao Franco Castello Branco, president of the council and minister of the interior and premier of Portugal, has since July, 1907, been "administrative dictator" of the country. Under his guidance the late King Carlos shot up the parliament house, dismissed the deputies and attended the press. Recently interviewed by William Maxwell, now correspondent of an English newspaper, the premier impressed him as a strong, honest, capable man engaged in a herculean task.

Senior Franco, says Mr. Maxwell, with his slight figure, black hair, dark complexion, little moustache and small black eyes suggests a familiar type of Japanese. His temperament is combative and when he speaks it is with vigorous, incisive eloquence. He professed himself to be an independent patriot, aiming at the raising of his country to a higher place among European nations.

His life has been more than once threatened, and he was compelled to sleep in a different house each night and go about protected by a guard.

While there had been considerable disruption in political affairs in Portugal for a long time, the strained relations between King Carlos and type of parliament were brought to a head only on May 11 last, by the dissolution of the chambers. The state councillors addressed a letter to the king protesting against the state of absolutism which resulted from the dissolution, and they declared then that the king and the country had been placed in a dangerous position.

The crisis in the political situation arose from the fact that the cabinet, which represented exclusively the new Liberal group, found its program of reforms obstructed by both the old Conservative and Progressive parties, and decided to ask for the dissolution of parliament, in order to bring about the promulgation of a number of measures by means of decrees.

The cabinet was of the opinion that thus having established its determination radically to reorganize the affairs of the country, it could appeal with the fullest confidence to the people in a general election. The opposition attacked the king for dissolving parliament, declaring this to be an unconstitutional step.

Senior Franco, the premier, published a decree dissolving the chamber, and stated that after seven months of political strife, he had found it impossible to govern with a parliament and to carry out his legislative program, which included a policy of social and economic reforms and efficient party control of the administration.

In this manner he established a veritable dictatorship, and since then has governed with an iron hand.

Reports emanating from many parts of Portugal, and thru Madrid in Spain, within the last few months, have indicated that trouble was brewing for Portugal, and that revolutionists were at work. After numerous minor risings had been put down, the police on Jan. 23 came upon a widespread plot to overthrow the monarchy and proclaim Portugal a republic.

The plot was organized by a small group of advanced republicans and secret republican and labor organizations, armed with bombs and revolvers, to complete the work of revolution in the streets.

But the police raided the meeting places of the conspirators and made a number of arrests, seizing quantities of bombs, and other weapons, and since then other raids have been made in Lisbon, with the result that the police

King Carlos was a notable figure among the crowned heads of Europe. He was a bon vivant and early showed a literary and artistic bent of mind. He was fond of music and was skilful with the brush. Despite the fact that he was very stout, the king was a great athlete, being particularly skilful as a swimmer and known as one of the most remarkable revolver shots in the world. He was fond of hunting, and devoted a great deal of time to that sport at his estate of Villa Vicosa. The king was devoted to Queen Amelie, who was famous as the most beautiful queen in Europe.

Of the crown prince little is known, except that he appeared to be very different from his father in disposition.
It recently was reported that the crown prince had had a disagreement with the king over the abdication of Carlos in favor of his son, and that the crown prince had been banished from Lisbon, but this was denied, and shortly after the circulation of this report the two were seen in close companionship

FIERCE STORM SWEEPS EAST COAST

Ships Torn From Moorings—Wharves and Bridges Carried
Away—Nets
Lost.

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 2.—(Special.)— The worst storm in years swept over Halifax and other parts of Nova Scotia last night. There was wholesale destruction along the waterfront, and telephone and telegraph lines were levelled so that communication along the coast and other parts of the province is cut off.

Several schooners in the harbor were driven ashore, and the government quarantine steamer Argus was forced from her moorings and driven ashore on the Dartmouth side of the harbor.

The homebound mail steamer Gramplan, with passengers, which was to have sailed last night, was forced to remain in port until this morning. The wind blew sixty miles an hour, and was accompanied by a blizzard of snow. At midnight this turned to rain, which fell in torrents. Accompanying the snow, rain and wind was a terrific electrical storm.

Lightning struck the 125-foot chimney of the Nova Scotia Insane Hospital at 2 o'clock this morning and tore out forty-tons of bricks from its outer coverings. Some of the debris fell thru a window into one of the rooms, and a seamstress was injured slightly.

The success in Portugal has been a great deal of anxiety for several generations. The late Queen Maria II, Marka Pia, had been married, but her husband died almost immediately. Very shortly after messages were sent to Germany and a marriage arranged between Prince Ferdinand, cousin of Queen Victoria, and the prince consort, Dom Fernando, as he was known, became the father of a large family.

The people were very happy and content during this union, and when the Queen died Dom Fernando became regent until his son, Pedro V, came of age and ascended the throne. It was during the regency that Dom Fernando married the Countess D'Edla.

Queen Maria and Dom Pedro, emperor of Brazil, were brother and sister, and there were two parties aspiring to the throne through this connection. Pedro V. was not long on the throne till he died of a peculiar disease—some said pestilence and some poison. One after another his brothers died, also in the same way, until Dom Luiz, the youngest, came to the throne. He had been in Brazil, and on returning to Portugal was very much annoyed to find he was to be king. It was his son, Carlos, who was king when he was so unexpectedly ended. Dom Fernando died some ten years ago.

Characteristics of King and Queen.
Queen Maria had the pleasantest memories of his visit to Lisbon, but naturally refused to disclose details of the life of the court, whose equities he had been so unexpectantly ended.

The king was much more popular than the queen, he said, with the people, and in public appearance, as at the bull fights, the king was received with tremendous applause, while the queen was met with silence. This was largely on account of the attitude of the king in sliding with the people against the church. Both the royal couple drove about the streets quite freely, and he was often seen out in his dog-cart.
When driving in her victoria, the queen was frequently stop and chat with people she knew, and the royal children would go about the streets freely alone. Col. Maclean was surprised to see them go about so unprotected. The queen is considered the handsomest woman in Europe. Many people visited Lisbon merely to see her. She was a great athlete and swimmer, and has saved a number of lives in the Tagus, jumping from her victoria after drowning persons. She also took part in hospital nursing, and was interested in humane society work, interfering if she saw men ill-

people visited Lisbon merely to see
her. She was a great athlete and
also took part in hospital nursing,
treating their mules, or driving mules freely alone. Col. Maclean was surprised to see them go about so unprotected.
