COMMERCIAL DEAL SPOILS EXPERIMENT

Boy Had Sold Groundhogs
Dad Relied on to Test
Ancient Theory.

Monmouth, Kansas, Feb. 2.—John Willheimer's experiment with the groundhog theory of ancient origin and annual discussion, ended in failure today.

After standing in his observation tower near the billet which he established for five groundhogs last fall, Willheimer received a visit from his 14-year-old son, John Willheimer, Jr.

"I'm sorry, dad," young Willheimer began, "I didn't mean to do anything wrong. But there won't be any groundhogs sticking their noses out of that den today. Last fall some fellows were out here hunting from town and said they wanted some possums. Sam Willets and I sacked those groundhogs and sold them to the fellows for two dollars apiece as possums."

Willheimer reluctantly left his Lightning Creek observation tower. Later at the town store, where he was the centre of a curious crowd of neighbors, he declared he would let somebody else solve the question.

MRS. SYLVIA FOSTER, of Buffalo, N.Y., who says she wishes she could go into every home and tell how Tanlac completely restored her health after she had lost all hope of ever being well again.

"They had given up all hope of my ever being well again, but thanks to Tanlac I am feeling as well now as I ever felt in my life and I only wish I had time to go to every home and tell every sick person about this grand medicine."

"A year ago last January I had a severe attack of influenza which left me in a terribly weakened condition and my appetite was so poor that I ate little more than enough to keep body and soul together."

"My heart palpitated so dreadfully at times that it seemed like it had stopped altogether and I would think I was so nervous that I couldn't drink my tea or coffee without spilling it."

"My sleep was restless and broken and I would have smothering spells and would just have to get up and go to the window so I could breathe."

"I finally started taking Tanlac on the advice of a friend and before I had finished taking the second bottle my neighbors could tell I was improving right along. Well, it has only taken five bottles to restore my health completely."

"My appetite is just splendid now, my nerves are strong and steady, my housework is a real pleasure and I can sleep like a child at night. In fact I never felt better in my life than I do now."

The above remarkable statement was made by Mrs. Sylvia Foster, of 208 S. Division St., Buffalo, N. Y., a well-known and highly respected resident of that city.

Tanlac is sold in Toronto by Tamblin Drug Stores, and by an established agency in every town.

the government's proposal to license white women to work in Chinese laundries and restaurants. Where was the government's manhood? Rome in her worst days never made such an indecent proposal. Such a thing had never even been suggested among the blacks of the southern states. If the Labor party stood for it he would sever his connection with that party. He noticed the attorney-general laughing. That gentleman would laugh at anything but his pet hobby, the O.T.A.

As for Hydro-radial affairs, Mr. MacBride thought the appointment of a commission of inquiry had been a great mistake. If it was information they wanted why could they not get it from their own experts? If the government was going to delegate its powers to others it should not wait for the recall, but simply go right straight home.

O. T. A. Enforcement.

Regarding the enforcement of the O.T.A., Mr. MacBride said it was a matter of shame the way the attorney-general was attempting to force an observance of the act. He had adopted a kaiser-like spy system to aid him when he asked for the formation of citizens' committees throughout the province to advise the government.

The attorney-general denied this. "There," answered Mr. MacBride, "we have another instance of the attorney-general's insincerity." Mr. MacBride then read a letter signed by the premier, in which the request was made that ten or fifteen names of citizens be furnished the government, who proposed to consult them regarding enforcement matters.

The smallness of the salary paid to officers responsible for the enforcement of the O.T.A. was the subject of a vigorous criticism by Mr. MacBride.

As for the timber inquiry, there had been too much muck-raking. If the government had anything up its sleeve it should take the country into its confidence. Muck-raking was driving good public men out of private life. Let the government come thru and come thru clean if they had anything regarding the timber areas of the province.

Labor Leader Speaks.

G. C. Halow, leader of the Labor group, thought Mr. MacBride had at last learned the little hymn, "Dare to be a David, Dare to Stand Alone."

Mothers' pensions and increased compensation for workmen were, according to Mr. MacBride, the result of his efforts alone, the Labor group of the house having nothing to do with them. (Laughter.) He had also complained that the Labor group were doing nothing in furtherance of humanitarian legislation. The contrary was the case.

The position of his group in the house was to get every possible bit of labor legislation they could.

Regarding Hydro affairs, he would, on some future occasion, make some observations which were not in line with the expressed views of the government. The O.T.A., too, was another question which he proposed to also discuss later.

Politics and Good Roads.

R. R. Hall, Liberal, (Parry Sound), demanded a new system of supervision in the construction of good roads. As things now stood, politics entered into the construction of roads.

The Liberal group in the house, said Mr. Hall, would extend a helping hand on every possible occasion to the government so long as it stayed on the straight and narrow path of

The men had been friends from their youth. Their wives, as dear to each other as sisters.

But one of the husbands was ruled by the male's rash spirit of conquest. One of the wives was athirst for the romance her marriage had lost.

And so, in a moment of midsummer madness—

A story that tests true love with temptation and burns out all the dross.

house to be a mutual admiration society. He proposed to vary the monomony, but hoped his criticisms would be taken in good part. The premier had been delightfully vague regarding his broadening out policy. He skated all around the question; no one knew exactly what he meant. It would seem since coming to Toronto he had learned the legislation waltz. (Laughter.) It was also said he was an expert of the shimmy.

The premier was always preaching sincerity, and Mr. MacBride said that Mr. Drury had implied that all previous political leaders in Canadian history had lacked that quality. He referred to Sir John A. Macdonald, declaring that no "untried man, only a year in power and undiscovered eighteen months ago," should thus slight the memory of so able and earnest a leader. He recalled that Mr. Drury had been defeated in his own riding in a previous election.

Exploiting Ontario.

Ontario had been exploited by grasping corporations, Mr. MacBride protested, but the free trade barriers were removed to allow the gold of Wall Street to enter, those responsible for it would be country destroyers and wreckers. The premier was always preaching free trade, and if he tried to ride to Ottawa on the free trade horse he would be there blocking his way for all he was worth.

The government mothers' pension act was a disgrace to the province. "Shame on you, gentlemen, with all the money the province has to hand a paltry cheque for $40 or $50 to a mother with two children," cried Mr. MacBride. "It is a charity of the worst kind. It should be increased. Bring in a measure for the improvement of the conditions of women on farms, you will find me behind you, and I will not quibble. But this mothers' pension act is humiliating."

As for the administration of the act it was shameful. Mr. MacBride read several letters from widows who had their cases considered by government investigators. They disclosed a very unsatisfactory state of affairs. There was too much red tape.

Compensation to injured workmen had been increased last session to 66 1/2 per cent of their earnings after a fight. Even that was not enough.

Cause of Labor Troubles.

"If you want to eliminate 89 per cent of the strikes in Ontario today, enact eight-hour legislation," said Mr. MacBride. "But under this administration the eight-hour day is not practicable. A little more sincerity regarding this matter is badly needed."

The eight-hour day, continued Mr. MacBride, was generally recognized and approved as being both advisable and desirable.

There was a little breeze at this point. Mr. MacBride had said that Karl Homuth (S. Waterloo) had the help of "Jimmy" Simpson in his campaign.

Mr. Homuth said this was an absolute falsehood, and demanded a withdrawal.

Mr. MacBride refused to withdraw. He bowed to the ruling, but intimated he would later make good his assertion.

Mr. MacBride was indignant over
