A RAID IN CHINATOWN

Hop Lee, a Chinaman, is in trouble as the result of a raid the police made on his grocery store, 19 Paradise Row, last night. Inspector Jones had been informed that Hop was selling liquor, and last evening in the company of Sergeants Kilpatrick and Smith and Officers Covay and Perry, the inspector entered the store, as soon as the officers went into the place all the Chinamen "vamoosed" with the exception of the owner, who stood his ground. A search revealed three half gallon jugs consigned to Hop Lee and marked "paid." Two of the jugs contained a little gin, but the third was empty. The police also took charge of two bottles of sweet gin, a set of dominoes, a box of dice and a sum of money.

No arrests were made last night.

THE HELL OF SCRIPTURE

Evangelist Streeter's Interesting Discourse on the State of Future Punishment.

Evangelist Streeter, of Allegheny, Pa., occupied the pulpit of the Church of the Messiah, yesterday afternoon and evening. At the first service he delivered an interesting discourse on "The Scriptural Hell" and in the evening, took as his subject "The Church."

If the argument of the former sermon be true, the prevailing idea of eternal torment and the terrors of a literal unquenchable fire must be totally incorrect.

The reverend gentleman pointed out that different views of hell, and for this reason he had termed his discourse "The Scriptural Hell." None of the many theories were to be considered by contrast in the presentation of hell, which by some was regarded as the abode of the dead. They believed that the dead were not dead, and held that hell was divided into a number of apartments adapted to its inhabitants.

The Roman Catholics, he said, believed it was a place of eternal torment, and of indescribable horrors. He regarded it as a place of everlasting torment, meaning anguish of mind.

Protestants held the same view as Roman Catholics, although some varied in opinion, believing that the torment was mental or physical, or both.

Others again believed that the punishment suffered in hell to be self-inflicted. It was, he said, generally believed that the condition of those in hell was hopeless.

Mr. Streeter argued that there was a great deal of misconception as to the original penalty suffered by Adam, asserted that if we would find out what happened to Adam, we would ascertain what happened to his descendants. Adam had been placed here on probation and through disobedience had fallen, and so it was that by one man sin came into the world. But God had found a remedy, for Christ had come into the world and paid the penalty.

The Old Testament Scriptures were written in the Hebrew language, and the New Testament in Greek. The words were selected by some translators of the English Bible to express the sense of the Hebrew word sheol and the Greek word hades, which sometimes were also rendered "grave" and "pit." In the old English the word hell meant to conceal, to hide, to cover, and in the scriptures is referred to as the place where the wicked are kept, and it is this, he said, how could there be flames in hell? Again scripture referred to it as a place where there was no consciousness, no knowledge of light.

It is referred to in Deuteronomy as where men die, and again it is spoken of through scripture as where the dead lie. Jacob expected that Joseph had gone there, and Job had prayed to go there. It could not therefore be a place of torment. For, he had said, when God's wrath had passed over he would come up out of sheol again. Christ went there but returned from it—for the Psalmist says, Thou wilt not suffer my soul to remain in hell. Hell or hades, the speaker pointed out, were figurative terms, and the punishment referred to was really the destruction of the finally impenitent.

There would, he said, be a resurrection of those who had lived good lives, would be eternal bliss, and the reward of the wicked, destruction. The dead would be brought from their graves and judged, while those living at the time would be given an opportunity to amend their lives.

STRANGERS ON ROLLERSKATES

Undoubtedly one of the most interesting features of a visit to St. John, Exhibition week, will be a whirl on roller skates in the immense Victoria Rink on City Road, reached by any Paradise Row (white) line of cars. People living in the smaller parts of the Maritime Provinces will enjoy this innovation to the fullest, for it is not only a privilege to skate on the safe little wheels as it is the joy of persons living in the central cities, and whether it be morning, afternoon or evening the opportunity is the same. Manager Armstrong has a corps of competent assistants to instruct beginners in the art of roller skating, which, after all is much easier than skating on ice, and in a few minutes the most awkward skater will be rolling around on the skates as gracefully as the next one.

Small charge for spectators.
