Stetson.

A REMARKABLE CASE OF INSANITY.

A young man was charged at the criminal court of Montreal with the commission of a serious offence. The history of the case has been gathered from the following summary of the advocate's address to the jury in favour of the prisoner.
The accused is a young man of an honorable and respectable father, Mr. St. Etienne. At the age of ten, the youth left his home, being placed in the establishment of M. de La Roche, a well known proprietor of the Landed, who had intended to train up Melour as a domestic, hoping to make of him an attached and useful one. He long, however, they say was equally upon the affection of his father, that the latter resolved to give him the advantages of a superior education, and to take corresponding care of his fortune in life. From that time onwards, Melour Gerard became like an adopted child of the house, and grew up on terms of apparent equality with M. de La Roche's children, and the daughter of his benefactor. The children were mates at school and play, being nearly of the same age.
