Free Kindergarten Association Met

Yesterday Afternoon the Child Welfare Exhibit at the Exhibition Was Discussed—The Teachers Will Assist at One of the Booths

A special meeting of the Free Kindergarten Association was held yesterday afternoon in the Bible Rooms, the President, Mrs. F. E. Hume, presiding. The Child Welfare Exhibit at the Exhibition was discussed and the share which the Association will take taken over. The teachers will assist at one of the booths.

An interesting address was listened to from Mrs. A. P. Robinson who had recently returned from California where she has been taking a post-graduate course in Kindergarten work. She told of the schools in California which she visited speaking especially of the kindergarten system used whereby the primary and kindergarten grades are housed in bilinguals in the school yards. The yards are fitted up with apparatus for play, sand pits and sand tables.

The meeting resolved itself into a business one as it will be impossible on account of exhibition work to hold the regular one next week. The Kindergarten will respond to the exhibition. A resolution of regret at the departure from the city of Miss Edith Stephens was passed. Miss Stephens has gone to Charlotte, N. C., to teach for Miss Barrett who is to be absent for a year. No one was appointed to fill Miss Stephens' place. Her work in the mothers' meetings and at the story-telling hour has been wonderful.

The hearing question is vexing the Association as they have had to move from the Portland Street Methodist Church, and have no yet been unable to find room in the North End. The Brunswick Street Rooms are no longer available while leaving them short of space in the March Bridge District. The Association were greatly en-

LIFE'S LESSON.

In the garden there a busy bee, glowing, gleaming,
On a bed of rich Lubella blue
A red gemstone's dreaming,
And on its nest a butterfly sees
Slightly sleeping,
With little awe-inspired eyes
Slightly peeping.

The butterfly softly moves its wings,
Gently, gaily,
It smiles at Life's eternal things
Honey, daily,
While red gemstones so abound,
Softly moving,
Need aught more marvellous be found,
Living, proving?

IN CHARGE OF THE HALIFAX, I. O. D. E.

The news that Dr. H. H. Clark and Dr. Clarke of Toronto, both of whom are recognized authorities on the care and training of the footbinder, will be coming to the province during September, and make, under government auspices, a survey of the province, will be received with special interest by all those familiar with the need for precisely that kind of survey, says the Halifax Herald. It is the intention to open a psychiatric clinic in the city in October, under the superintendence of Dr. Wilson, in charge of the I. O. D. E. Home, and the visit of these two able men should prove to students interested in such work as the clinic aims to do.

Commenced by receiving a letter from the Knights of Pythias regarding them the use of the room in the building recently purchased by the Knights as long as it was needed by the Society. This means a given free of charge and the ladies are much pleased at the appreciation shown by the organization of the value of Free Kindergarten work. A vote of thanks was passed to the Knights.

Spanish Monarchs Dine At Hotel

Democracy is Order of the Day and the Formality Which Formerly Hedged Rulers is Lacking.

(Cross-Atlantic Newspaper Service) By LYDIA K. COMMANGER. London, August 25.—The King and Queen of Spain took a decided step towards democracy and away from Court convention when, on their recent visit to London they attended a private dinner party at a hotel. This Spanish Court is one of great formality, yet the Spanish sovereigns displayed a democracy in accord with the times, and enjoyed an experience as yet unknown to the King and Queen of England.

Until a few years ago none of the ladies of the Royal family would have dreamed of eating a meal in the publicity of a restaurant. Princess Arthur of Connaught and since her marriage Lady Patricia Ramsay have broken through the convention, and are often to be seen enjoying a meal at one of the more exclusive restaurants.

More democratic still is the Princess Alice, the Queen's sister-in-law, who patronizes the quieter tea shops of Bond Street and its neighborhood when she comes to town for a day's shopping.

Even the older Princesses have marched with the times, in some extent. Queen Victoria would have been amused to hear of her daughter, the Princess Marie Louise, now to have rooms in St. James's Palace, has been living for many months past at her club.

CHOICE ITEMS IN HIS BILL OF EXPENSES

"Open Work Hose for Plump Widows"; "Face Cream for Charming Blonde."

COST $236.68 TO GET DOUBLE-CROSSED

Democratic Candidate for House of Representatives Tells How His Money Was Spent in Campaign.

(Copyright 1920 by Public Ledger Co.) Washington, Aug. 24.—Boy pose Democrats. A honest man has been found at last. And the proof of the honesty is now in the records of the House of Representatives. He is G. H. Poree, of the Tenth Missouri district, who was defeated in the Democratic primary in that state for Congress.

"This total cost to get double-crossed, $236.68. It is the final pity line in the list of expenditures made by Mr. Poree, which also lists 'open work hose for plump widows' and 'face cream for charming blonde.'"

Intimate details of his campaign such as made public by Mr. Poree are not within the money of the oldest employee of the House and his frankness may be used as a tip by both parties in the handling of the surface vote. In order to make sure that no one would overlook his items, Mr. Poree wrote, on the outside of his seven statements, 'note carefully items on page 2.' These included:

- Aug. 1.—Photograph of myself that resembles Jeff's partner, Mitt, $1.50
- Aug. 2.—One jar 'face cream' for passing out to a charming brunette for passing out my cards, 35 cents.
- Aug. 3.—Another jar 'face cream' for a charming brunette for passing out my cards, 35 cents.
- July 27.—For street car fare to stimp garden where 'Tony' Steuwer and Congressional committee held election one night, a week previous to legal primary and nominated my opponent for Congress in the Tenth district, 14 cents.
- Aug. 1.—Notary fee for her trouble in swearing me and keeping me from casting out this instrument, 50 cents.
- Aug. 14.—Postage on this, 2 cents.
- Aug. 14.—Notary fee for the trouble in swearing me and keeping me from casting out this instrument, 50 cents.

RED CURRANT MARMALADE.

To six pounds of red currants add six cups of sugar, one-half pound of raisins and seasoning of one-half teaspoon of mace. Boil the currants soft and press through a sieve. Boil half the yellow rind of the oranges in a little water and chop fine. Chop the raisins and cup up the pulp of the oranges. Then boil all together until the mixture will require half or three-quarters of an hour.

IN MEMORY OF EDITH CAVELL.

A monument to Edith Cavell, by the sculptor Gabriel Poch, presented to the city of Paris by Le Matin, has been unveiled in the Tuilleries Gardens. The body of the dead heroine lies in a coffin which is covered by a heavy helmet, emblem of Prussian militarism.

SCIENCE PROVES THE DANGER OF BLEEDING GUMS.

Medical science proves that unhealthy gums cause serious ailments. People suffering from Pyorrhea (a disease of the gums) often suffer from other ills, such as rheumatism, anemia, nervous disorders, or weakened vital organs. These ills have been traced in many cases to the Pyorrhea germs which breed in pockets about the teeth.

GERALDINE FARRAR IN THE RIDDLE WOMAN

The Associated Exhibitors, Inc., formally enter the realm of producers of great motion pictures with the release on October 3 of "The Riddle Woman," with Geraldine Farrar and cast which in every respect is said to rank with the finest accomplishments of the motion picture world.

"The Riddle Woman" was more than three months in the course of production and on a finished product will, in the opinion of those who have just witnessed the first screening of the picture, be classed as a triumph for the tense drama.

As a stage offering, "The Riddle Woman," in which Mrs. Bertha K. Ketch appeared for two full seasons, ranked among the premier dramatic works. As a motion picture, with Geraldine Farrar portraying the role of Lilla, portrayed by Kallisch in the legitimate, it should rank equally as high. For its debut before the showmen of the United States, the Associated Exhibitors could not have selected a more appropriate attraction.

Strong Supporting Cast. Aside from the dramatic appeal of the story, the acting of Miss Farrar and the direction of Mr. Jose, the picture should have as much to recommend it as a great box-office attraction as any big picture. Two players who have been starred in their own right are seen in support of Miss Farrar—Montagu Love and Adolphe Menjou. In addition there are Win. T. Carleton, Frank Losee, Louis Stern and Madge Bellamy, a beautiful young girl who makes her first appearance before the camera in this attraction. Miss Bellamy was recruited from the stage, where she has been seen for several years in support of Win. Gillette.

WHY STAY FAT?

The answer of most fat people is that exercise and dieting is too hard, too troublesome and too dangerous a method to force the weight down. However, in Marmola Prescription Tablets, all these difficulties are overcome. They are absolutely harmless, entail no dieting or violent exercise, and have the added advantage of cleansing. One little tablet after each meal and at bedtime—as pleasant to eat as candy—will reduce your weight two, three or four pounds a week, and leave no bad results such as wrinkles or flabby skin. A good box is sold by druggists at the reasonable price of one dollar, or if preferable they may be obtained by sending the amount to the Marmola Chemical Building, Detroit, Mich. They will be mailed by mail, prepaid, in plain, sealed cover.

Robert Harvey Randolph, who is in possession of an income of ten thousand a year, has the missing heiress is undiscovered is thrown over by Misses Van Tolliver, who wants at least one hundred thousand a year to spend. Bobby covers his lady love, after refusing to kiss her good-bye and goes toward home thinking of the heiress, he saw once when she was a small girl. On the way he sees a taxi with the door open, jumps in and is carried to the state door of a theatre, where the usual villain is attempting to entrap the heiress. They are about to enter his cab, he allows the lady to enter, gives the man a poke in the face and orders caddy to drive through the park. Later he takes the girl to his room and begins a serious conversation with her.

"Then," he said, "if you like me and if you're not afraid, please begin at the start and tell me about it." The girl's eyes fell and sought the shade. Her face slowly paled to the fiend of her somber thoughts. She was no longer pretty; she was beautiful, with a revealing transparency that made her seem unfeigned, a disembodied spirit of sincerity and truth, indubitably pure.

"I had a nurse once," she cried, in a low voice, and a wire-haired terrier, a show-dog and a darling. His name was Sport." She raised solemn eyes to Randolph's face as though measuring his powers of understanding. "My nurse died and then, one day, I had to sell Sport; I wasn't old enough to sell myself."

She stopped speaking with an unmistakable finality. Randolph was overwhelmed by the flood of information that this slip of a girl had poured into two weary words. The story in four lines and a revelation of the heart thrown in for good measure! Over and above that, he had to reckon with the confirmation of a suspicion which had been slowly establishing itself in his mind that he had met her before, that not for the first time this night had those soft lips, curved for merry words, smiled. "My, what a bump!" within his hearing.

So many considerations pressed to his immediate attention that he did not know to the actual present too late to stem the tide of tears that suddenly rose to the girl's eyes. "Oh," she sobbed, "what is to become of me? I was so happy here, if you hadn't made me think."

If anything has been said in the course of these pages to give the impression that Mr. Randolph was modest about Joseph or how just the girl or packed with provity to the exclusion of red blood, forget it. At the sight of those tears, he slid the length of the couch to first base, flung the girl in his arms, switched her round so that she lay across his knees, drew her face against his shoulder, and kissed her gently.

"You poor kiddie," he said softly, "what a devil of a time you've had! But believe me when I tell you it's all over. This is the night that starts your old happy run into the blue sky again. Don't worry." "And I shall call you 'dolph,'" said Miss Thornton, and then broke into "After—thanked you again and—from my heart—I'm going to be a girl. That's a wrong word, isn't it, smiling happily—he did exactly what he said. "In the one eye, you promise me to stay here until ten o'clock. But before we come to the don't thank me ever. It's a I'd simply love to have you me as Joseph or How or, at worst, Randy. Won't you?" She looked this way and the she let her face ripple to drowsy smiles.

"I'll go as far as Randy," ceded mischievously; then went and the shadow cunningly can't stay here, you ready happened. Mr. Randolph reached her in a single step, caught her by both wrists, "me!" he said. "If you won't stay here without a breath of fresh air, I'll stay with you. Now, do you or do you not?" "Do what?" insisted Robert. "I promise."

"Make yourself absolutely comfortable," she said, as she dropped her hands and turned toward him. "I feel like Christmas E. Miss Thornton meekly. Please tell me what's going on?"

"You've guessed it—Christ answered enigmatically, tossed latch-key on the table, and watched, tormented by the fact that he had retired to a where they wouldn't be disturbed. At long last the door opened, Mr. Randolph stepped to greet the girl, who walked rather strangely, her head bowed; the driver motor box, threw in the clutch, and is the next as though he were to meet the morning.

"Strange doings!" thought opens Pamela Thornton, as she watched the motor start to start. "I've never seen a vately conducted voyage of discovery before."

Strange doings, indeed, an or still could imagine Pamela heard as well as seen. This really happened. Mr. Randolph the cabman gently but then he said:

"Look here, I want to buy you." "Gowan, boss, wot d'yer fer? Here I been freazin' mo' for two mortal hours an' a you starts right in kickin' me out of here. You don't want me?" "Shucks!" said Mr. B.

There was something in the voice that clutched at his head him forward. He drew up slowly to meet his lips as her as lightly, as imperious brother ever saluted a stranger more fearfully. Immediate body went limp in his arms, a dead weight of unmissable "It is true," she murmured. "You don't really and I can never love you."

Randolph awoke to that his back her, seized her by his hands, had forced her eye of the blaze in his.

"You generous, careless, little fool!" he growled. "The one most maintain and provide of lovable charm that never trembled to hold in arms."

"Why don't you kiss the talk?" she demanded. "Because there's no reason desperate barter, my dear. In one little motion she his arms, on her feet, back head upthrown.

"How dare you—how dare me by that name?" she formed; her eyes flashed with light as made the blaze in paltry things. "Do you think to be in your arms," she asked out the words. "Vivienne—her lips curled in distant name—'ah, yes; poor thing!'"

"I've never forgotten. I could smile crookedly. 'You are down so hard, or how are you?' Why did I dropped her face in her sobbed as though her heart were broken.

Randolph did not leap to her time; he did not cheer. With his eyes on the fire that peeped from between round her ankles, he began to cry. "I knew you! I knew Sport Meggie. Just once I met you. I've never forgotten. I could smile crookedly. 'You are down so hard, or how are you?' Why did I dropped her face in her sobbed as though her heart were broken.

Pamela, in spite of her heard every word he said. In women invariably do anything of personal import to them. "So you were that awfully she said, disclosing to cheeks and looking him over round her ankles, he began to cry. "I knew you! I knew Sport Meggie. Just once I met you. I've never forgotten. ## Why the Present Price of Furs

A FEW years ago "green" muskrat pelts sold for fifty cents. Today they bring from $4.00 to $6.00. Add to that the cost of tanning, dyeing, cutting, making, marketing, etc.—all at present-day labor costs,—and you get some idea for the reason of current prices on Hudson Seal (dyed muskrat) garments.

Similar facts hold true with every other fur garment today. It is not a matter of prices but of service, style, comfort and beauty, for fur garments are economical.

Our August Fur Sale

offers many exceptional opportunities for a choice selection from a wide variety of prices. Many elaborate garments of luxurious quality, as well as the plain and simple fur pieces, are available here at most economical prices.

The lady who would be comfortably and stylishly gowned next Winter will find this Fur Sale a means for saving money while yet realizing the height of Fur Fashions.

- ### COATS
