PHOTOGRAPH SHOWING HOW GEO. B. JONES, M.P.P., AT APOHAQUI OBSERVES THE LAW CONCERNING THE PROTECTION OF STREAMS FROM SAWDUST

Pile of Sawdust, with Dump-cart at top of the pile, about to dump a load over.

Friday, Sept. 8. Harry Masters Brundage, the eleven-year-old son of Mrs. Joseph Brundage, Broad street, was accidentally shot and killed on the exhibition grounds yesterday afternoon by William Humphreys, a young lad of twelve years, who was assisting Patrick Walsh, manager of a shooting gallery on the Pike.

A few days ago an enterprising photographer had occasion to visit Jones Bros' mill, which is situated on the Millstream very near its junction with the Kennebecasis. There is an immense pile of sawdust along the Millstream, so that the foot of the pile being in the bed of the stream, so that at every rise of water the stream eats into the bottom of the pile and carries away great quantities of sawdust. As the autumn rains and high water may now be expected soon, it is evident that many tons of the sawdust will be swept away and carried into the Kennebecasis, and evidently the sawdust is dumped on the Millstream bank with the expectation that it will be so disposed of. This is the old story.

Just when the merriment on the show grounds was at its height, about 3.30 p. m., while Mlle. Bergerat was being strapped into her automobile preparatory to taking her death swing, a shot rang out, heard only by those in the immediate vicinity, owing to the noise of the many Pike attractions, and in a few minutes little Harry Brundage was dead with a bullet wound through the heart.

The photograph herewith published gives some idea of the extent of the sawdust pile, and shows a man with a horse and dump cart on top of the pile. This exhibit is a particularly interesting one because of a letter written by Jones Bros. a few weeks ago when the Dominion fishery inspector warned them against further infringement of the law against the pollution of streams. In that letter Mr. Jones or his firm (George B. Jones is one of the members of the legislature for Kings county) solemnly asserted that while he had attempted to prevent sawdust from being dumped into the Millstream, or so placed that the stream might wash it away, he could not always watch his men and their early in the spring they had ignored his instructions and actually dumped some sawdust where it was subsequently reached by an unusual rise of water.

The little boy looked pitiful as it lay, with his face in the sky, and there were wet eyes in the crowd of a rough-looking man who had the appearance of having seen the seamy side of life, remarked: "He was a fine kid, but that's always the way, the good ones are taken and the bad ones left." The little chest was bared and a small hole showed where the bullet had entered the left ventricle. Word was sent for the ambulance and while awaiting its arrival the body was carried to the police headquarters in the transportation building.

How the photograph is to be reconciled with the statements made in Jones Bros' letter at the time the complaint was made by the Dominion fishery office is a question upon which light is needed.

Where Victim Worked. Paul Dooley, for whom young Brundage was working, conducts a booth in which the visitor is invited to employ wood in dolls. The lad was employed in picking up the balls and at the time of the accident was standing at the side of the booth farthest from the shooting gallery, which was alongside. It appears that a man had just been shooting and something apparently going wrong with the gun, he handed it to young Humphreys to fix. While working with it, the weapon discharged and the bullet passed between the boards in the side wall and struck Brundage in the chest. He was critically injured alongside the boy and did not at first realize what had happened. Then he saw the boy away and exclaimed: "I'm shot." He quickly opened the lad's blouse and saw blood trickling from a small wound over the heart. Then he was sent for a doctor. In the meantime for about a minute the boy was conscious and cried and talked hysterically, then lapsed into unconsciousness. Mr. Dooley said the boy was willing and anxious to earn a little money he had given him a pocketful of money. He was greatly affected by the sad occurrence.

Some Facts About Poultry

By J. R. Cote, Chatham, Ontario.

(By J. R. Cote, Chatham, Ont.) The poultry industry in Canada and the United States brings in more money than all the gold and silver mines combined; this may seem a wild statement but it is amply borne by statistics. Statistics are too dry, and no doubt before this had plenty of chances to see in black and white the millions of eggs which are laid and sold every year.

A hen should lay between 100 to 150 eggs, and the hen of Canada lays on an average fifty eggs which is far too low, and this is due to the carelessness attached to poultry by the farmers. Well-bred stock with good care will give the number of eggs stated, and this has been in several ways demonstrated, but I have had my own experience in my yards, and I can certify that the above statement is absolutely correct.

What about cost of producing? Under ordinary conditions a dozen of eggs can be produced for four cents a dozen. But the amount of money you could derive from poultry keeping for egg production. There are about 100 varieties of domestic fowls and these are divided into ten classes, as follows: American, Asiatic, Mediterranean, Hamburg, Polish, French, English, Game, Bantams and miscellaneous.

The American class contains those breeds which have originated in the United States such as Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Javas and Dominiques and other breeds. The Asiatic class has been bred from stock originally brought from Asia, among which we find Brahmans, Cochins and Langshans.

The Mediterranean class originated along the shores of the sea from which they get their name. But four breeds belong to that class and they are the Andalusians, the Whitefaced Black Spanish, the Leghorns and the Minorcas. The class called Mamburg which contains the varieties known formerly as "Pheasant" and "Dutch" also belongs to that group.

The class called Polish does not originate from Poland, but is called Polish from the globular top-knot or crest which surmounts the head of the members of that variety. The name Polish derives from the word "Pol" which is the name given to that top-knot in England.

The Houdans, Cochevours and LaFleches constitute the French class. The Houdans are not bred largely in this country, although they are a good breed, and the other two breeds are hardly found anywhere worth while to mention. The Dorkings constitute the English class, and whether they do not do well in their country or by other reasons, you can find very few in Canada, and far less in the States.

The Game class contains the Pit and the exhibition varieties, and the Bantam class contains many varieties, and these are being consequently raised in large numbers. They are about all the varieties of the larger breeds. The smaller it is the more it is raised.
