POPULATION PERILS

Hundred Thousand Babies Die Every Year in England

In the death rate, as in everything else, war is establishing its own disastrous record. Not only in the trenches are the lives of Britain's best sons being paid away. It has been nobly stated that the men at the front are fighting for the lives and liberties of our children. Yet of those very children, whose happiness depends upon the victory of right over might, scores of thousands are perishing. And the pity of it is that at least half of these lives, with the exercise of a little care, could easily be saved!

Few are aware of the fact that a baby dies every five minutes throughout the year! Every year over 100,000 babies perish, and at least 50,000 of these could easily be saved. An entire army corps of England's future generation wiped out through carelessness and neglect!

Do Not Live Here are some more tragic facts. Of every 1,000 children born in this country, no fewer than 250 die either at birth or during the first year of life. Eleven die during the first twenty-two hours; twenty-two die in the first seven days, whilst thirty-six are wrested from their mothers at the tender age of one month.

Fewer babies are being born now than ever before in the history of our country. Whilst one baby is being helped nine others are being neglected. What does this mean? Simply this. That decrease in population means decrease in power!

It is a deplorable fact that there are only about 600 health visitors to visit 75,000 babies. Only one visitor for every 1,000 babies or so! How can we expect to counteract this evil? There should be at least 1,800 health visitors continually at their work endeavoring to alleviate the lot of the family who cannot afford the facilities offered to their wealthier and more fortunate fellow-beings.

The professional and educated classes as a whole under fifty babies in every 1,000. On the other hand, the unskilled labor and artisan classes lose over 150 per 1,000. This means that the poorer classes lose three babies to every one baby lost by the professional classes. "Why should this be?" the reader will say; "there is something wrong here." Of course there is something wrong!

Evils of the Slums In Hamstead the infant death rate per 1,000 is seventy-four, in Shore-ditch 148. You congratulate yourself that you do not live in Shore-ditch. But have a thought for those who do. Bad housing conditions, ignorance, dirt, and vitiated air, all tend to cause heavy infant mortality. In many of the houses in Shore-ditch five people live in one room. It is their bedroom, living-room, drawing-room, kitchen, scullery, and outhouse. This is the reason why so many children grow up malnourished and stunted. It is the object of National Baby Week to combat all these evils; the evils of drink, of poverty, of bad sanitation, but, above all, the evil of ignorance which is the chief of all these contributory causes.

O HADIAH, did you see the tracks out there?" called the guide.

The Indian thus addressed who was known as Rain-In-The-Face among his own people, merely ed in the affirmative and cor his work of "clearing up" after a hearty breakfast which had been in the frosty morning. He put the provisions cooking utensils into the tent, was banked heavily around snow, then carefully tied the broad or cake, the next child bread-baker and so it continued and then the fun is to see how suggested by the first word.

"Are there bears in these woods?" asked the boy. "There's worse than bears," pumas—they call 'em panthers States. They're a terrible beast I'd rather risk meetin' one than bull moose when he's mad." "Is it their great horns?" I seen them in pictures and hung walls—as yet. I'd hate to be with such horns." "It's their hoofs I'm scared said Dick. "A big moose can a whale with his fore hoofs w jumps. There's plenty of them bush, but the only place to set lot of 'em is where they yard the winter—hard together and down the snow in a sheltered where they can get water and plenty of soft green timber to "I hope we'll find just such today," said Clarence, his easier and confident.

"Little boss," said Dick, twi lip-in a smile as he lighted h "let me give you a word of If you see a bear in these wood we ain't there to help you, gi the road and get out of his way If you see a bull moose and time, climb a good strong tre there ain't time and you don't he's seen you, you better hide brush till he walks off. If I you and there ain't time to c tree, run like the devil. If you puma before he sees you—but never see one before he see And if you ever see one, take me you're done for unless y make quick and good use of a "Huh! What are you trying t me for?" demanded Clarence Dick grinned broadly.

The camp was some miles t the "bush" on the Quebec side Temiscamingue. With his Uncle once had traveled up to the lit settlement of Gordon Creek, they had engaged a white gul a red and otherwise prepared moose hunt over the snows. Luck would have it, the uncle,
