

Standing in Drawing.

The drawing in most of the schools consists in the copying of pictures from text-books or the blackboard. In a few schools I found exceptionally good work in object drawing both in black and white and in colours. Several of the teachers had taken special courses of study in art and a good beginning in the subject is being made in the schools under their charge.

The following table summarizes the results of the tests in drawing. The figures below the grades indicate the number of schools in which the classes were given the grading.
