"Full of lofty sentiment and in his best style as to rhythm and measure."

"Sparkles with patriotic fervor."—Toronto Star.

"Patriotic and beautiful sentiment."—Insurance and Finance Chronicle.

"An artistic production . . . true patriotism."—The Canadian Teacher.

"With the true patriotic touch, and in a spirit of devout reverence and gratitude that makes for highest patriotism."

—The Christian Guardian.

"A poem at once brilliant, impassioned and melancholy. . . . Loyalty and divine love of the country of one's birth is not sufficiently encouraged in the minds and hearts of our young people. Dominion Day never seems to mean anything more than a holiday to a large number of Canadians. . . . Therefore, Mr. Balfour's poem, in its chaste beauty, its fine grasp of all this mighty north land and her varied beauties, is a timely as well as a patriotic piece of work."

—The Mail and Empire.

"An admirable poem. . . . The verses breathe the noblest of sentiment in their impassioned description of the natural beauties and grandeur of the Dominion. The style is graceful and careful, and the poem contains many verses of unusual strength and beauty."

—The Toronto Globe.
