

THE CHURCH'S ACCUSERS

A recent issue of a French... a weekly quotes from that distinguished writer, F. Brunetiere...

Who, then, are they who reproach religion with being too wearisome? Those who do not practice it.

Who are they who reproach the Church for exacting faith in her revealed doctrines? Those who believe in the worst fooleries...

Who are they who reproach the Church for not recognizing the dignity of man? Those who claim the monkey from their father, chance for their master, pleasure for their law, annihilation for their end.

Who are they who upbraid the Church with being a religion of money? Those despoil her of her goods with the utmost greed.

Who are they who accuse the Church of being intolerant? Those who cannot allow any one to hold an opinion differing from their own.

Who are they who charge the Church with being an enemy to light? Those who, despising liberty, have closed Catholic schools and driven out the nuns and the religious teachers.

Who are they who reproach the Church with being the enemy of the people? Those who, ignorant of history, are persecuting the charitable institutions established by religion.

Who are they who indulge with the utmost audacity in violent tirades against the Church and her teachings? Those who know nothing whatever of religion or of what its precepts require.

We are not afraid, then, either of the number or of the fury of those who attack us, and dare rather to congratulate ourselves. They know what they are doing, and that we are what the world calls a force.

Their anger is aroused by the knowledge that they are able neither to slight, nor to despise nor, above all to ignore us.

We overawe them by our number, our doctrines, our ideas, the progress we are continually making, the fear they have that we shall achieve ever greater things, by our confidence and our hopes. Out of reach as we are of their anger, it is their indifference that we have to dread.

Born under persecution, growing up amidst heresies, strengthened by controversies, if the Church had no longer adversaries we would need to despair of the promises of her Founder. But as long as struggle and opposition continue, she will live.

THE SPIRIT OF COMMERCIALISM

BISHOP HICKEY DEPLORES IT AS ONE OF THE GREATEST EVILS OF OUR DAY. THE SINS OF SOCIETY

At the Cathedral in Rochester on a recent Sunday, Bishop Hickey spoke of the object and aim of human life, namely the salvation of the soul.

He deplored the excessive commercialism of the age and declared that while we are in society, we must not forget the final object of our creation.

SPRIT OF COMMERCIALISM - "If we review society to-day," said Bishop Hickey, "and observe it with an unprejudiced, unbiased eye, what would come home to us? I think it would be the existence of the spirit of commercialism, which has invaded all ranks of life.

The more men have to-day, the more they seek to have. After all things have only a relative value, and what may please in one case may in another give very little of enjoyment.

If we look back to an age and time of our own country, when men lived and moved more slowly, can we say that we are happier to-day than our forefathers of a hundred years ago, who knew few of the advantages we have, because in very truth they did not exist? To be sure, we cannot change the cycle of time, but are men happier because they possess a thousandfold more than their ancestors?

This is not a pessimistic view of life, but the point to be made is this, that men to-day are working by the spirit of commercialism to gain the things of time, and it is not true that the effects of it all is to destroy in themselves and society the higher and better ideals of life? Yes, commercialism has invaded the home, has destroyed the peace, has broken friendship, has made men forget the young, and their obligations towards the aged—in a word has held up before the view a God whom men would follow to the forgetting of the noble and more beautiful things in life.

Closely allied with that spirit of commercialism is the love of excessive pleasure. It is true that we are social beings, and need legitimate recreation, but we should never forget that pleasure of recreation is not the essential thing in life, but only the incidental of it. It may be compared to the seasoning of the food. It is a question, then, whether it shall be God, work and then pleasure, or pleasure, work and God last of all.

SOCIETY INDICATED - Society to-day is indicated in certain spots for its very commercial.

izing of vices. It is bad enough that pleasure should lead and control men, but to day, without doubt, vice is bought and sold, so that it is reported of one, who did not hesitate to say, that he would serve the public with filth until the public revolted. And right here I want to say that our fathers and mothers cannot stand too strongly or too positively before their children to protect them. What we want in men and women strong enough in conviction to stand up and as soldiers of the cross, fight these evils of to-day. God help society when men buy and sell vice.

Side by side with this spirit of commercialism a love of pleasure there is found a forgetfulness of God. What is to protect us? answer purity of life. And that will be determined by our associations in life. Our thoughts are the seeds of our words and actions, and if what I see and hear is pure, my thoughts and words will be pure. Purity in anything is so lovely that we all seek it, whether it be in the flower, in the atmosphere, in the water, or in the associations of life. Ah, how beautifully did that virtue come into the world through Jesus Christ, from His Virgin Mother, and ever since the Catholic Church has held this type up to the world in her sons and daughters, so that there is no atmosphere where it is found more beautifully than close to the tabernacle of Christ.
